

W. J. BRYAN IS TAKEN BY DEATH

be in good health, he realized it was necessary for him to conserve his strength. During last week he visited Dr. Raymond Wallace, in Chattanooga, who informed him that he had a slight dilation of heart, with arrhythmia (missed beats).

Warned by Doctors

Previously, on July 17, Mr. Bryan was advised by physicians to refrain from further activities. Dr. Wallace advised against an address Mr. Bryan had planned for Pikeville on the following Sunday.

Mr. Bryan delivered his speech, but limited it to ten minutes, telling his friends that had to conserve his strength as he feared might not live through the Scopes' trial.

Dr. Wallace said Bryan appeared surprised to learn he had heart trouble, but was not worried. Yesterday he declined an automobile from the Chattanooga hotel to the railroad station, saying he preferred to walk.

When he arrived here, he went immediately to his home and from there to the southern Methodist Episcopal church. He sat on the front seat and before the sermon by Rev. A. E. Peterson, of Buna, Tex., he was called upon for a prayer.

Ate Hearty Dinner

After church services Mr. Bryan returned to his home, where with Mrs. Bryan and Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers he had dinner. He ate a large amount of food and was in one of his most jovial moods since arriving here. Before he decided to take a nap, he called Chattanooga over long distance telephone to ask about some detail of his speech, which was being published.

Mr. Bryan told his wife that he had never felt better in his life and was ready to take his fight for fundamentalism to the country.

He told of his trip to the Holy Land within the next several months and the writing he had planned. He then remarked that "I am so sleepy" and entered his room shortly after 3 o'clock.

A Heavy Sleeper

Mrs. Bryan was on the porch of the home and could see her husband on the bed. About 4:30, Mrs. Bryan felt her husband had been asleep long enough and sent Mr. McCartney, who also was Mr. Bryan's personal attendant, to wake him.

"He always was a heavy sleeper and was hard to wake," Mr. McCartney said, adding that after he had shaken Mr. Bryan twice, he noticed he was not breathing.

Mr. Andrews remarked on the courage Mrs. Bryan exhibited. She told friends that while she was glad her husband had passed away peacefully and without pain, she regretted to have him die at a time when prepared for such a great work. She announced through her friends to be made for fundamentalism and the writing he had planned. Mr. Bryan had begun a history of his life and frequently during the past several months had expressed a desire to complete it.

The fallen champion of religious orthodoxy lay this morning on a couch by the front window of the Rogers' home, a silk like covering over his classic features. A light breeze stirred the covering as a few friends viewed the body.

In Peaceful Sleep

Peaceful and serene as though in a happy slumber, Mr. Bryan never looked more lifelike than he did today. His lips were set in the determined little lines with the slight suggestion of a common smile. The gently closed lids over the eyes which burned piercingly when the great man was in action, was added to the effect of perfect contentment.

In the front room, across the hall, Mrs. Bryan rested in bed. Her attendants said she slept little, if at all, during the night, although she lay quietly most of the long hours.

It was in the room just in the rear of where she lay today that the commoner breathed late yesterday his last breath, unwatched by the eye of man. Later he was removed to where he reposed today, in the parlor of the simple home.

Plans Halted

Definite plans for the removal of the body and the final services were still lacking this morning. Attendees reported that Mrs. Bryan wanted further information from her children, the first of whom, Mrs. Owen, is expected to arrive in Dayton tomorrow morning. It was the belief of her friends that a funeral party would leave Dayton until tomorrow and more probably not before Wednesday, when the movement would begin toward Washington.

Flag Lowered

The national colors were displayed throughout the town's business portion today, flying at half staff in honor of the dead.

Every protection and comfort were being given to the widow by a group of her chosen attendants who forbade callers to speak with the bereaved and invalid woman.

Lies in State

DAYTON, Tenn., July 27.—(AP)—The body of William Jennings Bryan will lie in state this afternoon between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock, while the public will be invited to view the body. Mrs. Bryan and a counsel of friends decided today. The place will be the home where Mr. Bryan died or the Rhea county court-house, where he fought his last great battle.

Funeral Plans

DAYTON, Tenn., July 27.—(AP)—The body of William Jennings Bryan, who died suddenly in sleep here late yesterday, will move on a special railroad car from Dayton for Washington at 8:40 o'clock Wednesday morning. Mrs. Bryan announced through her friends to be made for fundamentalism and the writing he had planned. Mr. Bryan had begun a history of his life and frequently during the past several months had expressed a desire to complete it.

NOTED LEADERS OFFER TRIBUTES

ton, New York: "A great man has fallen in Israel. He was a patriot of the sort so sorely needed by America in this, her crucial hour."

Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war: "Mr. Bryan has been the undisputed leader in a great cause in politics and religious movements for more than a generation."

Clem L. Shaver, democratic national chairman: "The country has lost a great chief, the democratic party a commanding figure, and the moral forces of America a powerful advocate."

William C. Redfield, secretary of commerce in the Wilson cabinet: "His outstanding public service was in 1913, when he smoothed over the threatened difficulty between the United States and Japan."

Senator Copeland, New York: "No man ever had greater power over an audience."

Senator Edwards, New Jersey: "A great mind has passed."

Former senator Alice Pomeroy of Ohio: "He will be regarded as one of the greatest political orators of this generation."

Governor Sizer of New Jersey: "An outstanding American, he was the ardent champion of many a good cause."

Senator Fletcher of Florida: "His place cannot be filled, his passing is a misfortune to his party and his country."

John R. Voorhis, grand scribe of Tammany Hall: "The world has lost the advantage of his original work."

Senator Borah of Idaho: "The purity of his purpose and the sincerity of his convictions no one who knew him well will doubt. He never intended to speak other than for humanity."

GET GOOD CATCH

Local Fishermen Get Good Catch Sunday at Williamson River.

R. E. Stinson, one of the best fishermen in this section of the country, with his two daughters and Leslie Peyton spent Sunday on the Williamson river fishing. Mr. Stinson brought back 25 good sized trout as the result of his day's fishing.

MISS DONLEY LEAVES

Southern Girl Left This Morning After Months Visit Here

Miss Agnes Donley of Birmingham, Alabama, who has been the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. Graham for the past fortnight, left this morning for Los Angeles, where she will join 200 southern girls, known as the Alexander tourlets, and will journey on south to her home in Birmingham. The trip south will take about two weeks. In the party are girls from Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, Mississippi and Kentucky.

RETURN HOME

Have Spent Past Two Months Visiting Points of Interest

Mr. and Mrs. John Uhrman returned on Saturday from an extended visit in Chicago, Lincoln, Nebraska, and California cities, and left for their home at Algoma, where Mr. Uhrman is one of the prominent ranchers. They made the trip by motor.

FROM THE SOUTH

R. H. Honey of San Francisco arrived here this afternoon to attend to business matters.

Bert C. Thomas spent the weekend at the Hunt cottage at Lake of the Woods.

NORTHERN LINES ANXIOUS TO AID

through a process to make it more than just gold. So it is with all other things of value, such as timber, of which this section has such a bountiful supply, and of various crops, present and prospective. A tree in the forest, be it ever so beautiful a specimen, is just a tree until processes put it into some form for market.

"The lines which I represent are seeking entrance to Klamath Falls by extending the Oregon Trunk, for the purpose of expanding their business, of course, but also for the purpose of affording greater facilities to this section of the Great Northwest for marketing its products. These lines are builders; they penetrate undeveloped territory and help in its development. That is history. They would do the same thing in their construction into this city.

Plenty of cars must be had to haul products to market and thus to insure profitable business. Development without assurance of sufficient cars is not only stunted, it is nullified. There is no gainsaying the fact that with two big transcontinental lines added to its facilities, Klamath Falls would be assured cars for all its needs, present and future.

We have no quarrel with anyone, neither are we seeking that which is against the interests of this or any other community. When we complete the new railroad into Klamath Falls, connecting this city with two great transcontinental railroad systems, it will be our constant purpose to provide good service."

MURPHEYS RETURN

Mr. and Mrs. F. Murphey returned last evening from Seattle, where they spent several days on an enjoyable trip. They made the trip in their new Hudson car.

TO MEDFORD

Mr. and Mrs. Al Raymond, Miss Nell Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. George Rowe and Mrs. A. Patterson made up a party of local people who motored to Medford Sunday. The party stopped at Ashland for lunch, motoring on to Medford later in the afternoon.

TO VISIT LUCAS HOME

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Forkner of Delma, California, arrived here Saturday evening for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Lucas. Mrs. Forkner and Mrs. Lucas are sisters.

At the PINE TREE

Tuesday night is the time set for the Song Revue Deluxe and there is considerable interest manifest because of the prominence of the players and the talent they have displayed at their previous showings. This will be an opportunity for the lovers of music to hear the most popular of the songs that are being sung today.

The entire cast is well known and when any of these people appear alone it is a good show: Misses Joan McDonald, Josephine Meissner, Geraldine Mars, Addie Jenkins, Helen Abbey, Ruth Lindsey, Clifford Hogue, Delos Mills, Frank Confer, Harold Bell, Earl Volenti and Borde's Special Orchestra. And when they are all in one show it is better than ever.

Closes Today

The final showings of "Madame Sans Gene," starring Gloria Swanson, which opened a two-day run at the Pine Tree theater, will take place there today.

"Madame Sans Gene" is based on the French stage success by Victorien Sardou and Emile Moreau and has to do with a flirtatious little French laundress, who becomes a duchess and a power behind the throne of France in the days of Napoleon.

Charles de Roche heads the supporting cast.

At The LIBERTY

"The Light of Western Stars," which made its initial appearance at the Liberty theater last night, combines the story-telling genius of Zane Grey and the acting ability of Jack Holt, Noah Beery and Billie Dove.

Mr. Grey, who knows the west as few other men know it and can write about it sympathetically and understandingly, has turned his attention in this adventurous romance-drama to the vast southwest, the great range and desert country of Arizona, which for long remained the stamping ground of the cattle rustlers and bad men of the old west. Last time tonight at the Liberty.

Hold Funeral Of Mrs. Anna Bellman

Funeral services for Mrs. Anna Bellman, aged 62, who died early Saturday morning from an attack of acute indigestion, were held this morning at 10:30 o'clock in the Whitlock mortuary. From the mortuary the funeral cortege proceeded to Linkville cemetery, where the body was interred. The Rev. T. D. Yarnes, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated at the services. Mrs. Bellman is survived by her husband, A. A. Bellman, and a son, G. A. Bellman. Mrs. Bellman had been a resident of Klamath county 14 years and was born in Huntington, Ind.

A wise man is merely one who keeps his friends from discovering how foolish he is.

Fishermen Find Antique Statue

ATHENS, July 27, (AP)—A well-preserved statue of antiquity was found in the sea off the coast of Marathon by a number of fishermen. The statue is of bronze and represents the life-sized cast of a youth. Greek experts declare that the statue is extremely valuable and have compared it to the famous statue of the "Youth of Antioch."
