

At the PINE TREE

Jack Dempsey may well look out for his laurels!
 In "A Broadway Butterfly," the attraction at the Pine Tree theatre today, Louise Fazenda comes to the rescue of the little butterfly, played by Dorothy Devore, and in a thrilling moment saves her from the clutches of that handsome portrayer of villainous roles, John Roche.
 During the special scenes, Louise, as ever, was endeavoring to put every ounce of realism into her characterization when, suddenly, in the excitement of the moment, she landed a sharp hook to the jaw and felled the thunderstruck actor. It was not necessary to take the count, for it was about 15 minutes before the actor was able to sit up and take notice.
