still lingers and influences our thoughts.

 As a help to cheerfulness we must get into the habit of thinking "Everything is all right." This must be one of our formulas.
 "How in the world" once said a friend who was beginning to study on this subject, am I going to think everything is all right when I know it is all wrong? Yes, "is rather a difficult problem, it must be admitted, but that is really what we have to do and if we set about it seriously it can be done, as thousands have and if once we get into this current we cannot fail to get in touch with peace and prosperity vibrations."
 * * *
 Have you ever noticed how a whistle brightens things up? You may be feeling blue and depressed when suddenly some one on the street perhaps in the distant, maybe broadcasts a cheerful whistle, a few bars from some well known opera of a familiar dance number—how it lifts the clouds and makes you think things are not so bad after all.
 In the current number of one of our popular magazines is a sketch of that apostle of cheerfulness, Frank Stanton. You know he says that whatever happens, "Walstle right along." And his "keep-a-going" has done valiant service as a gloom dispeller and promoter of cheerfulness and courage. "When you feel like singing, sing," has in those few simple words a wealth of philosophy whose value to the world cannot be overestimated, while
 "Tain't no use to sit and waine,
 When the fish ain't on your line,
 Bait your hook and keep on trying"
 is as good a sermon as could be preached.

MIDSUMMER, with its blue sky, sunshine and flower scented air, is here, and while it is fast flying, we must make the most of it, for soon 'twill be fall, with leaves turning brown and flowers fading. It is at this time of the year that the toilers are looking forward to a little respite from the daily routine of household, business or other duties.

Would you like to be another person for awhile? After all that is the purpose of vacations. Instead of a change of scene, people really need a change of soul. Get outdoors if you would like to be different. Two weeks in the open country will make you a person who wakes in the morning with happiness, who moves through the day with contentment as instinctive as primitive as the laughter of a stream rippling in the sunlight. At dusk you will lie down to rest with a delicious fatigue and a sense of utter fulfillment you never knew in town. The scent of the wood smoke at twilight in the sleepy woods and the taste of bacon and fresh trout cooked on an open fire will savor your dinner through the long shut-in winter. All your hurried days will be easier and sweeter for the memory of the miles you tramped and the stars above your head on your vacation.

Humanity seems to realize more fully every year that all busy people require a change of air and scenery each summer, in order to do their best work in the more crowded work days of the year. So we see people from nearly every walk of life planning to spend a month, a week or possibly only a few days, on the coast, in the mountains or a camping party, as the case may be. But all have the one object in view, a rest from the daily routine of duties.

Klamath Falls may lack a few things to make living perfect, but no one has ever said that there are not the finest picnic and outing places at our doors. Go in any direction and one finds delightful spots. Conditions, environs and everything else combine to make of the outing places ideal trysts.

The summer relaxation has come, and it is just as much a part of the year as the winter round of debuts, the mad tear and hurry of the gay season, which is fast creeping upon us. The problem of problems is where to go, but everyone that can in going or has gone. To be within the hearing of the mighty rhythm of the waves, or to be near the peace of the forests and hills, everyone chooses his or her pleasure. All returning in the fall jubilant at discovering how charming is their own little city and their own little nook in this world.

Cheerfulness, say all metaphysical teachers, is a duty, a duty we owe not only to everyone about us, but also to ourselves.
 This is the modern view, a modern view which is as old as the hills, as nothing is more plainly and consistently taught throughout the Bible. It is to the various modern cults that we are indebted for our release from the gloom which formerly more or less held away over religion.
 The name of Coue is seldom heard among us now, but the spirit of the philosophy he taught while here

Pineapple Bavarian Cream

Heat a cupful of cream in a double boiler and dissolve in it half a package of soaked gelatin. Add a small can of grated pineapple and sugar to taste. When cool, but not set, fold in a cupful or more of cream whipped solid. Mold and chill. Pineapple Bavarian cream must be served as soon as possible after making, as the pineapple contains a ferment which affects the gelatin.

Pineapple Custard

Heat three cupfuls of milk in a double boiler. Beat together three fourths cupfuls sugar sifted with two tablespoons of flour and a pinch of salt and three eggs. Stir into the boiling milk and cook for fifteen minutes, stirring constantly. Take from the fire, add a teaspoon of vanilla and a can of grated pineapple. Mix thoroughly, chill and serve with whipped cream.
