

As War Spirit Simmers in China

PERFECT CRIME CASE IS SOLVED

Calif. His hiding place in Oakland was revealed in a casual way, another stroke of fate. The apartment house proprietor attending a dinner party Saturday night became suspicious of his tenant when shown a newspaper photograph of the murder fugitive. After reflection the dinner guest became certain as to the identity of his new tenant and early next morning he notified the police. The house was quickly surrounded and the suicide followed.

Mrs. Schwartz Faints
Mrs. Schwartz, who had constantly maintained that the charred body found in the partially wrecked laboratory was that of her husband, fainted when informed that he had taken his own life. Police have been unable to determine whether she had knowledge that he hadn't perished in the fire as at first seemed to be indicated.

A letter written to Mrs. Schwartz read: "Last Monday or Tuesday, I was in the lab. He came straight in. We talked to each other for a little while, when suddenly the man told me that if I didn't give him work, I had given him money. He attacked me. I gave him a blow on the head. He fell. I gave him another. He was dead. I never thought for a moment to let go, but I could not make my mind to go to Bell (Presumably the Schwartz attorney) and tell him, I decided to run away but made a dirty job of it. I put the man on the closet, got ready. Can you imagine how I felt all the time feeling I have to lose you and the dear boys, Oh God, how I suffered."

"Now I wish to tell you, my dear little girl, I do not know the man, never looked how he was dressed, never touched him after that.

"The only thing I did while I tried to burn him, to wipe out and go—I do not know where."

Get More Proof

While Schwartz lay dying from his wound, inflicted but a moment before the police had battered down the door to his apartment, detectives found in his possession evidence which proved almost conclusively that the crime had long been anticipated.

This, together with the assertion by Berkeley police that Schwartz was a student of "perfect crime," and other smoldering circumstances led officers to but one conclusion—a deliberate murder and death hoax.

The blast occurred on the night of July 30 and the charred body found in the laboratory was at first believed as Schwartz. Doubt as to the identity of the corpse, which was burned beyond recognition, crept into the case the next day. Evidence indicating that the body was not that of the chemist continued to pile up. And on Aug. 4, Schwartz was charged with murder and a nation wide search for him was begun.

Victim Identified

Identification of the victim was made after a week of exhaustive investigation. Several religious books found in the laboratory contained handwriting which later proved to be identical with that of a letter written by Barbe the victim, to a friend. It has not been definitely determined to what extent Mrs. Schwartz will receive insurance. Of the $100,000 insurance her husband carried his widow will receive not more than $25,000 and some doubt has been expressed if this amount will be paid.

A similar crime several years ago involved Dr. Bramfield, an Oregon dentist, who burned an automobile with the body of a man used as a substitute for the murderer, who also held heavy insurance. Bramfield like Schwartz, committed suicide. The Oregon man, under sentence of death, took his life in prison.
