LIGHTHOUSE TELLS LIGHT HISTORY

You don't have to be so very old to remember when your mother counted as one of her daily chores the cleaning of the lamp chimneys, trimming of the wicks and the filling of the lamps with oil. You also remember, perhaps, the time when the gas mantle was the supreme light-giver.

When man went from the oil lamp to the electric bulb—sometimes in one jump, sometimes by way of gas—he made a bigger step forward in illumination than in all his earlier history. Lighting had been a matter of oils and fats, lamps and candles, for unnumbered generations.

The whole history of lighting, almost, is told in the changes made in the first lighthouse built by the United States as an independent government. It's at Cape Henry at the entrance of Chesapeake Bay.

When the United States finished the lighthouse it used fish oil. That was in 1792. Sperm oil was substituted in 1810. Our whale fisheries began to decline, and other oils were sought, first rapeseed or colza oil and later lard oil.

Then we began to realize our wealth in petroleum, and kerosene was used. In 1910 a great improvement was made. Wick lamps were discarded and vaporized kerosene, with an incandescent mantle, was installed. But it lasted only a dozen years, when an electric incandescent lamp was substituted.

There's a whole history of illuminants in 133 years; fish oil, whale oil, volza oil, lard oil, kerosene, kerosene gas, electricity!

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON. — Emphatic as Uncle Sam's officials are, in saying that this country isn't going to forgive France the money she owes us, even though England intends to do so, the fact remains that the French and British between them, have managed to place America in an awkward position.

What France gets out of the bargain between her finance minister, M. Caillaux, and Winston Churchill, England's chancellor of the exchequer, is clear enough.

She pays 2 per cent on what she owes to the British, while the latter are paying off the United States. But she's never to pay the principal.

But what does England get out of it? Well, John Bull makes very few dickers that he doesn't think he sees a chance to profit by.

In the first place, France assumes the greater part of England's interest payments to the United States—the 2 per cent they agree to pay to the British while the British are paying America.

That's so much to the good. On top of it, vow as they may that they won't do what Chancellor of the Exchequer Winston Churchill agrees to do on behalf of the British, the American representatives at the debt settlement conference are surely to be subjected to tremendous pressure to do it.

If by any possibility they yield, England assuredly will say she's entitled to as favorable terms as is France and demand that the principal of her debt to the United States be cancelled also.

The French will put up a talk about like this:

"We were all fighting together. You Americans did part of our fighting with your money. You might as well expect us to indemnify you for the lives you lost as ask us to return the money you spent.

"Another thing, England jumped in and began helping us at the very beginning of the war. Yet she says we needn't pay her.

"Are you, who waited until the last minute, going to be any less liberal? And finally, if you don't admit the weight of these considerations, here's something else for you to bear in mind.

"You declared war before you were ready to begin fighting and we held the line for you—protected you, in fact—while you were getting up steam to go into action. How about a billion dollars worth of financial recognition of what we did for you?"

Miss Erdman will again teach in the high school, which so far has an enrollment of eight.

At the PINE TREE

Ninety-nine times out of a hundred lawyers, judges and the machinery of a divorce court are the agencies used in squaring the social triangle—and tears and publicly-aired troubles are the outstanding result of the affair.

The one hundredth time—and an entirely different and much more satisfactory method—is the basis for "Kiss Me Again", which is to be presented at the Pine Tree theater tonight.

"Kiss Me Again" is told with the aid of only five people—and every one of them is a screen celebrity. Marie Prevost appears as the foolish little wife, Mante Blue as the husband, John Roche as the "other man," Clara Bow as a conveniently invented "other woman" and Willard Louis in one of those unctuous comedy roles in which he excels.

Last evening's vaudeville entertainment at the Pine Tree was enjoyed by a packed house and the enthusiasm which greeted the various numbers showed the appreciation of the audience. Tom Copeland who has entertained over a million British and American troops with his Scottish songs and comedy was a real hit. The other numbers were also amusing particularly the last, the "Little Fantasy", presenting a musical and dancing revue.

At The LIBERTY

Western stories have always held their own and with the improved quality of productions starring Buck Jones have easily held their own. The cow-puncher star is not only a favorite in the west, but also in the east and in his latest picture, "The Man Who Played Square" he has been given an admirable vehicle. One of the big scenes is a mine explosion which represents the apex in film realism. It will be seen at the Liberty theatre tonight.

AT BAKER SATURDAY

BAKER, Ore., Sept. 10.—Stockmen in Baker county are looking forward to the hearing of the senate public lands committee here Saturday as an opportunity to present changes which they believe should be made in the federal laws governing grazing on the public domain.

"The stockman has no rights, only a permit which is revocable at any time", Jas. J. Shelton, secretary of the Oregon cattle and horse raiser's association, declared here today. "A system of leasing for a term of years would enable stockmen to put down wells and make other improvements as well as secure the future of their business. Such a policy would eliminate much of the present dissatisfaction."

C. Corn of the J. C. Barnes real estate firm, for $22,000, to A. C. Chew of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

The orchard consists of 150 acres, 50 of which are in pears, and Mr. Chew will make extensive improvements, including the building of two modern country homes on the property. Mr. Chew and his son are leading merchants and property holders in Oklahoma City.

Mr. Anderson is undecided as yet as to his future arrangements, but will probably rest for a year. —Medford Tribune.

The boys are Julius Blackwell, 14, William Camp### bell, 13, and Duan Haley, 13.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell, mother of the Campbell boy, said she did not know that it would do any good to bring her boy back as he would perhaps run away again.

The members of the local police force remarked upon the fact that the boys made fast time. They either obtained a long lift in somebody's automobile or beat their way on the trains, they said. —Eugene Register.

CHAPEL DEDICATED

The convent chapel and new music department of St. Mary's Catholic school was dedicated by the local Catholic congregation Sunday morning with the choir of St. Mary's church, the Knights of Columbus and other organizations taking part. With the opening of the chapel the church and school property has been unified all being now in the same block.

The services opened with a procession by the members of the various organizations from the church to the convent. Musical selections were rendered by the church choir and Rev. Father O'Hara made an address of thanksgiving. The many blessings received by the congregation during the past few years were pointed out by the pastor.

A new marble altar, given by the children of Mrs. Elizabeth Schaefer in her memory, was also dedicated at the services. The altar will be installed in the church as soon as plans are drawn by architects and will be one of the features of a new church to be built some time in the near future. Eugene Register.

GOLDEN WEDDING

A very happy and unique event occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Bish, 428 Hamilton street, Medford, when in the presence of their eight children, 12 grandchildren, other relatives and friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bish renewed their marriage vows of 50 years ago. After congratulations and wishing them many more years of wedded life, all sat down to a table decorated with viands which only this of the culinary art can prepare.

A. W. Bish and his wife, Catherine Woody Bish, are a type of the hardy, early pioneers both having crossed the plains with their parents, taking six months to make the journey, and after many exciting incidents on the way, arrived in the Rogue River valley in 1864.

They were married in this valley and for many years have been residents of Medford, having reared their family here. Mr. Bish was one of the first contractors and builders of this city, having built many of the earlier homes, and he still continues that work to some extent.

Mrs. Bish, although having reared a large family, still continues her household duties, and many are the family gatherings for which she prepares the meals as only the pioneer mother can. The children present at this happy gathering were:

J. A. Bish and son of Portland; A. A. Bish, wife and son of Portland; George Bish of Medford; Lewis Bish, wife and two sons of Medford, Mrs. George Whelpley and daughter of Ashland, Mrs. Z. Walgamott and daughter of Phoenix, Ariz., Mrs. Dawson and four children of Medford and Mrs. George Reynolds, son and daughter of Medford.

May this venerable pair live to see many more happy and useful years, and then depart together to that land "where there is neither marrying nor giving in marriage," is the wish of their many friends. —Medford Tribune.

For the largest attendance at the annual conference of the Older Girls conference held this year the trophy shield won by the Oregon delegation has arrived here and is in possession of Jean M. Seeley of Eugene, one of the Oregon delegation.

The shield is of an attractive design and has a metal plaque on which is inscribed the winners of the trophy for the past four years. Iowa won the trophy in 1922, Colorado in 1923, Missouri in 1924, and this year it comes to Oregon to hold until the next annual conference. —Eugene Guard.

Correction Made in Lyle Platform

"When we (Klamath Falls) were small and the 'children' knew the police officers—"

That's the way a part of A. J. Lyle's campaign statement read in The Herald yesterday.

But it was a typographical error. It should have read:

"When we were small and the 'citizens' knew the police officers—"

The Herald is glad to make this correction for Mr. Lyle.
