KEEPING UP WITH THE JONSES

Everyone has marveled at the tremendous absorption of automobiles by the buying public. Fred Kelly, who writes about human nature in business for Nation's Business Magazine, talked with Leonard Ayres, the Cleveland statistician, about it.

"The automobile," said Colonel Ayres, "is one of the most highly competitive articles ever sold to the public. If you buy a piano your neighbor's piano doesn't come over and stand alongside of it to show up yours as inferior. But the moment you buy a car you are in competition with your neighbor. You are obliged to look at his car across the street and observe that it is better than yours. Immediately you secretly hope to have a better car just as soon as you can afford it—if not even sooner. No matter whether you're at home or riding about, your car is in competition with others, always ready to be a symbol of your status. You are almost forced into thinking of buying a better car than you can afford."

That reminded Colonel Ayres, too, that the big sale of cars during the last season hasn't been due to an increased demand for cars so much as to the fact that all cars more than a year or two old have suddenly become obsolete. The last season has seen a number of new improvements which have made people willing to dispose of old cars while they were still in good working condition.

ZANE GREY TALKS

That the younger generation is headed pell mell for perdition and that if nothing is done, the country is due for ruin, were the sentiments expressed by Zane Grey, noted author, at an early breakfast last Thursday at Dunsuir. Grey and his party were headed for the Rogue river region, where members of the party plan to fish and hunt for several weeks. It is Grey's annual trip to northern California and southern Oregon recreational points.

Grey's remarks followed a request by Professor T. Hood for the author to send a message to the Siskiyou teachers' institute. In session at Dunsuir.

"On such short notice," said Grey, "it would be impossible for me to formulate a suitable message, but I want to impress on the teachers the importance of their work. Crime and its consequences are rampant among our young people and unless drastic remedy is applied our country is doomed."

"A great measure of responsibility rests on the teachers to train the young away from evil influences and acts."

Grey also sent his best wishes for success to the institute before continuing his trip.—Siskiyou News.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON. — President Coolidge resents intimations that he's crippling the government departments by forcing them to economize. He says they're just as efficient as ever and all talk to the contrary is mere propaganda, designed to make it harder for him to cut down taxes. Doubtless there's a good deal in his, but if the president thinks the department personnels aren't really shrieking with agony, then he hasn't been listening, that's all.

The army and navy outery is worst, for the simple reason that they are, of all departments, the most liberally manned. Even on their last appropriations they nearly starved. They didn't need to, however.

The trouble was, they tried to stay too big. A given sum, which will just support a smallish army or navy comfortably obviously isn't going to support a much larger one without skimping, just as an income merely adequate for a family of two is altogether inadequate for a family of ten. The war and navy departments have been working hard on their present allowances by permitting

And now, according to the president, they've got to stand a fresh cut.

This, practically all the authorities say, means just one thing—they'll have to begin paring down in size. Anybody who ever knew any army or navy men will realize how that thought makes 'em gripe.
