Pride
In Appearance

Is an admirable trait common in the makeup of most men. It is a helpful characteristic that prompts men to better themselves and is encouraged from early childhood by right thinking mothers.

Men who evidence their respect for the best possible appearance by dressing well and selecting clothes of individual character and value are in turn respected by those who hold in high regard the ideal of individual progress and development, and esteemed by those who want the best.

No man can afford to not look his best, and tailor-made suits give to his form and build that clean cut individual appearance that should be portrayed by all men.
