The boy's name is Tom Stout, aged 15, who was scheduled to arrive here last night from Grants Pass on the evening train. A telegram advised police of his impending arrival but when the telegram arrived, the train had already drawn into the station.

Constitution Day Observed

Portland Attorney Addresses Chamber Forum

"One hundred and thirty-eight years ago, tomorrow, one of the greatest instruments of state ever conceived came into being when a group of American Patriots affixed their signatures to the American constitution."

Thus was Klamath reminded of the proximity of Constitution day by A. E. Clark, Portland attorney, who was the principal speaker at the chamber of commerce forum luncheon this noon.

"No other instrument of democracy has lived through the trials endured by the American constitution and existed," the speaker emphasized. "Originally conceived to serve 13 small agricultural colonies along the Atlantic seaboard, the instrument has served to be the guiding star of the nation during the great period of national expansion when the western boundary line pushed gradually westward until it reached the Pacific coast."

"Since the enactment of the constitution, 2000 amendments have been proposed and but 19 have been enacted. What greater proof is there of impregnability of that document. With the constitution always guiding us, we have developed into the most prosperous and powerful nation on the face of the earth."

"During his talk, Mr. Clark took occasion to criticize the attitude of certain of the larger towns of Oregon."

"There has been too much enmeshment and complacency, and a decided lack of cooperation," he said. "What we need is a simultaneous movement toward pushing this state ahead, such as is now in progress in California."

Local Girl Writes Of Conditions Now In Santa Barbara

Schools in Santa Barbara were damaged to the extent of $700,000, not including colleges and private schools, is the word received in Klamath Falls by relatives and friends of Miss Esther McAndrews daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin McAndrews, who recently returned to the southern city to resume her position as teacher.

Property loss is much greater than first estimated and according to Miss McAndrews they are having a most difficult time attempting to collect enough funds with which to rebuild the schools. Miss McAndrews is teaching in the basement of one of the business blocks.

The city has light quakes daily, according to Miss McAndrews' letter, with one severe one since her return south, some two weeks ago.

A souvenir book of the earthquake pictures has been received here from Miss McAndrews which shows the great damage which was done to just a few of the leading business houses. Among the most prominent including the complete destruction of the Van Ness Hotel, Church of Our Lady of Sorrows, San Marcos Building, American Legion and McKay Building, Power House, Southern California Edison Building, the Potter Theatre, Santa Barbara County Jail, Santa Barbara Library building, First National Bank building, Grand Hotel, and Brown Mug Cafe, and the Hotel California.

According to Miss McAndrews' letter the people talk of nothing else and it is not an unusual sight to go for 14 blocks on both sides of the street and see nothing but large buildings now total wrecks. Buildings are being torn down and rebuilt as fast as possible and wrecking crews work night and day in all parts of the city, Miss McAndrews writes.

At the PINE TREE

The most marvelous film of all time was exhibited at the Pine Tree last night. It is the long-heralded picturization of Conan Doyle's "The Lost World."

The story takes a group of intrepid explorers into the middle of a wilderness where roam the dinosaurs—and their related animals—of millions of years ago. How these animals have been recreated on the screen and how they are shown with the actors in the east, dwarfing them until they are nothing more than ants in size, we will leave for some technical expert to explain. Suffice it that these scenes are amazing to the point where they become magical in their effect.

If "The Lost World" did nothing more than to display this startling development of invention and photography, the show at the Pine Tree would be well worth the price of admission. But these scenes have been cast in a story, that supplies all the necessary elements of popular appeal. There is romance, splendid characterization and superb comedy. See it at the Pine Tree tonight.
