THE EVENING HERALD'S CLASSIFIED AD SECTION

In less advantageous positions for escape than they. The three survivors apparently were not suffering serious effects from their experience. They were able to walk without difficulty as they came down the gang plank wrapped in blankets.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Thirty-four members of the crew of the submarine S-51 lay imprisoned at the bottom of the Atlantic today after their vessel was rammed last night by the steamer City of Rome of the Ocean Steamship company, on her voyage from Savannah, Ga., to Boston.

Three survivors were picked up by the steamer and it was a matter of conjecture as to whether the remainder were drowned or were alive in the underwater vessel.

Rush to Rescue

While a fleet of rescue craft from Newport, R. I., New York City and New London, Conn., the submarine S-51, was rushed out to the point twenty miles east of Block Island, where the disaster occurred, those on shore eagerly awaited news of the crash. The City of Rome was proceeding to Boston and Captain Diehl, her commander, gave no details in his first terse message to officers of the company. She was due to reach Boston some time this afternoon, and it was stated she might not arrive before 4 or 5 o'clock.

Hope that the 33 men who went down with the S-51 might still be alive was increased when the destroyer Putnam sent to the scene from the naval training station at Newport, sent a wireless message, saying they had discovered what apparently was a buoy made up of a bunch of life preservers.

Naval men at Newport expressed the hope that the buoy had been floated out of the sunken craft.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The position of the submarine S-51, sunk off Block Island last night in a collision with the steamer City of Rome, was located today by rescue craft searching for the vessel, it was reported in a radio message to the Newport naval training station.

There was no sign of life, the message said, but crews of the rescue ships were optimistic that some of the 33 men who went down with the submarine might be alive.

The destroyer Putnam, which went out from Newport this morning, was returning to this port while the wrecking company's barge was setting out for the scene of the disaster with full equipment on board to bring the craft to the surface.

Have Some Air Commander O. H. Shaw, commanding officer of the Putnam, said when that ship returned to port, that in his opinion the men in the submerged submarine had enough air to last them 72 hours. Commander Shaw said in addition to the air compartments of the vessel, a considerable supply was carried in tanks and if the S-51 had not been smashed to pieces it was probable that at least a part of her crew might be alive.

The Putnam after touching Newport, proceeded to New London, where the rescue base is located.

In addition to the submarines, submarine salvage ships, mine sweepers and wrecking craft sent to the scene, four airplanes from the Chatham naval base were flying over the area. Another airplane from Vincent Astor's yacht was being pressed into service.

The position of the S-51 was given as about a mile and a half SSE off that first given by the City of Rome. Four submarines were standing by, as was Vincent Astor's yacht the Nourmahal.

NAVY SUBMARINE SINKS IN CRASH

not know what had happened. By the merest chance they were floated out of a hatch near the conning tower and picked up a few minutes later. They believed their comrades on the S-51 lost, as chlorine gas was already circulating in the interior of the submarine when they were thrown up. They said also that the other members of the crew were
