Given Ovation
The President and Mrs. Coolidge were greeted at Union station by James A. Drain, national commander of the American Legion, whose wife had come from Washington on the presidential train, Governor McMullen, of Nebraska, Mayor Dahlman of Omaha, and a score of prominent citizens and legion officials. Hundreds of former service men jammed the train space and station and as the president passed they broke into cheers.
From the station Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge were taken to the home of Walter Head, Omaha banker, who at one time was president of the American Bankers association. Although they had been aboard the train nearly forty hours, neither appeared fatigued. They smiled acknowledgement to cheers, their enthusiasm being in the midst of a patriotic demonstration apparently undiminished by the nasty weather.

Farthest Trip
In coming to Omaha to address the Legion, Mr. Coolidge traveled farther from Washington than at any time since entering the White House and through sections of the country he had not visited as chief executive.
He is the first president to honor the American Legion with his presence at its annual convention, although as vice president he attended the Kansas City gathering several years ago.
In addition to delivering a speech before the convention, the president before leaving late today for Washington, planned to attend a luncheon at the Omaha club, tendered him by prominent citizens and legion officials, and to review the members parade of American Legion afternoon. Arrangements had been made for him to ride at the head of the procession as far as the reviewing stand.
