Changes in Travel Are Shown by Olds

Methods of transcontinental travel have shown marvelous progress since the gold rush of the '40ers blazed the way from the Atlantic to the Pacific at a fearful cost of human life. How great the changes have been was strikingly brought out recently when the Miller Brothers 101 ranch, real wild west show, was playing in Lansing, Mich., the home of Olds Motor Works. At this time there were grouped all types of conveyances used for personal cross country transportation in the history of this country.

The first means of travel westward was depicted by an original "covered wagon" drawn by a yoke of oxen and piloted by Ezra Meeker, who is 95 years old. Mr. Meeker blazed the Oregon trail in 1852, making the first northern trip and using a replica of the wagon he had at Lansing. Last year he was a candidate for the state legislature in Washington and campaigned in an early, one cylinder Oldsmobile.

The next step after the covered wagon was the stage coach, which formed connecting links across the wilderness. This phase was shown at the gathering by one of the original stage coaches which ran from Fort Sill to Enid in the "Deadwood Dick" days. The old "hack" still bears the marks of fights with Indians and road agents.

Klamath Title Co. Is Re-Organized

After inactivity since 1918, J. F. Maguire Sr. has again opened up his abstract plant which will be known as the Klamath Title company, with an investment of $10,000 involved. C. T. Price, well known local abstractor, has bought into the business with Mr. Maguire and will have complete charge of all abstracts.

The new business will be located in the office of Maguire and Maguire. In 1913 Mr. Maguire, with Henry J. Weeks, first opened up the business and in 1918 Mr. Weeks left to enter the same business in Santa Ana where he has remained.

Until this time other business interests have kept Mr. Maguire from being actively engaged in this addition to his office.

Wakefield Will Have Big Opening of Garage Tonight

A dance, entertainment and refreshments, and the opportunity to inspect the most up to date garage building in southern Oregon await those who take advantage of the formal opening of the Wakefield Motor Car company's new home at 170 Main street.

H. S. Wakefield, local Dodge dealer, has been planning the ideal garage for several years and the $50,000 home that he is opening tonight for his motor car family is in his estimation the most convenient place for the purchase and servicing of cars that can be designed.

The entire Main street front of the building is given over to office, small parts stock room, and salesroom. Back of these there is a big space for storage and at the rear is a modernly equipped repair department. The full basement is given over to the storage of cars and to stock room for the heavier parts.

Mr. Wakefield sums it up when he says: "I have built a place for everything and if everything is kept in its place our new home will enable us to make our Dodge car and Graham truck service 100% more efficient."

Women Will Aid in Planting of Trees

Encouraged by the Rotary club and the chamber of commerce, a number of women of Klamath Falls met yesterday afternoon at the office of the county treasurer to make definite plans for the planting of uniform trees about the city.

It is the intention of the women to cooperate in the planting of elms, maples and lindens. F. T. Farley, a well known nurseryman, has kindly agreed to assist in the planting, if his services be needed.

The trees, which will be bought in large quantities, can be purchased through the chamber of commerce at a price not to exceed $1.50 each. By October 15 the women hope to have the work under way and completed within one month's time. On the committee yesterday afternoon, Miss Vera Houston, county treasurer, served as chairman. Others on the committee were Mrs. Jask Kimball, Mrs. H. N. Moe, Mrs. W. O. Smith, Mrs. Howard Perrin, Mrs. T. Ferguson and Miss Claire Calkins.
