Copco Expanding to Meet Increase

An expansion that had to be met with development and extension of their facilities is responsible for the $32,700 which is being spent by the California Oregon Power company in Klamath Falls this fall. Permit to expend this money for their improvements has been granted by the city council.

Principally the improvements consist of sub stations in different sections of the city, and also line extensions in certain districts.

Because of the large power company permit, building activities for last week were hoisted to $50,147. The usual number of residences were announced, although last week the price for dwellings slightly exceeded that of the week before. A storage room will be constructed for the Stone Cash grocery, between Fourth and Fifth streets by Cofer Bros.

Permits were issued to the following: Jesse J. Barley, a dwelling on Fulton street to cost $2200; Mrs. George Mansfield, an addition to her home on Oregon avenue to cost $250; James E. Smith, a dwelling on Alameda street, to cost $2500; F. J. Fleber, a dwelling on Gobi street to cost $250; George Moon, a dwelling on Rad-life street to cost $150; Central Hotel, remodeling of structure for new post office, to cost $3000; California Oregon Power company, extensions and improvements, $32,721; J. M. Frazier, a dwelling on Oak street to cost $1800; Ray Litton, a wood house on Commercial street to cost $150; L. T. Brock, a wood house on High street to cost $75; George R. Moore, a dwelling on Oregon avenue to cost $150; Viola Stearns a garage on Tenth street to cost $150; Harry Hoxworth, a dwelling on Martin street to cost $1200; J. A. Maddox, a dwelling on Montclair street to cost $3500; Cofer Bros. a storage room for Stone's Cash grocery, on the alley running between Fourth and Fifth street, to cost $1500.

MITCHELL HALTS NAVAL INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8. —(AP)—Colonel Wm. Mitchell objected today in taking the oath before the naval court inquiring into the Shenandoah disaster.

After he had objected to being sworn before the court under the order of the army directing him to appear, a formal subpoena was issued today by the naval body. Judge Advocate Foley delivered it in person and Mitchell refused to accept service under advice of his counsel.

While the court was in executive session demanding its course after Mitchell had objected to taking the oath, Representative Frank R. Reid, of Illinois, his attorney, made public a communication which the Colonel sent yesterday to the Adjutant General of the army.

Advised officially that Colonel Mitchell had refused to appear, the court directed the judge advocate to communicate that fact to the war department, which had originally ordered Mitchell to come before the court and give testimony.

Captain Paul Filey, the judge advocate, explained beforehand that Colonel Mitchell was present under orders from the adjutant general of the army upon request of the naval court.

Immediately after the fiery army flier had taken the stand, Admiral Jones explained that his presence was desired so that he might be questioned concerning statements credited to him regarding the Shenandoah disaster. The admiral produced a small bible, requesting that the colonel be duly sworn in accord with the regulations. It was then that Mr. Reid made his objection.

Colonel Mitchell appeared in full uniform with serried rows of decorations on the tunic of his uniform.

SIGN PLACING AWAITS POSTS

"It won't be long now," Thus did Elmer Balsiger give assurance that in a short time street signs would be installed.

"We have been held up by the 200 posts ordered about three weeks ago," Mr. Balsiger remarked. "When they come, there is nothing left to stop us unless it is a small matter of about $75 which the public must donate to do the matter up right."

Mr. Balsiger is in charge of the street sign movement, instituted by the Evening Herald and carried on by the chamber of commerce. He believes that in placing street signs, the sign men should start at Link river bridge and, working east, install signs on Main street and two streets on either side of Main.

At the PINE TREE

On the vaudeville bill tonight is one of the fastest jazz singing and dancing acts that has ever played this circuit, which is sure to please. The Shadowgraph Revue is a show within a show and is most interesting. Two clever sisters offer some clever comedy harmony singing and the aerial act is clever and daring. Ambassador Crowley's monologue and yodeling is also a good number and the entire bill is up to standard.

Patrons of the Pine Tree will have an opportunity to see how a nationwide beauty contest is conducted when Viola Dana, in "The Beauty Prize" her latest production, comes tonight for a two days' run. "The Beauty Prize" is a picturization of the Saturday Evening Post story of that name by Nina Wilcox Putnam, and is said to provide rousing good entertainment by virtue of its splendid comedy, really dramatic plot and the details of the contest.

At The LIBERTY

Swift in a Kansas cyclone is the action in "The Trail Rider," the picture coming to the Liberty tonight. The story, adapted from George Washington Ogden's novel, relates the stirring scenes in Kansas during the colorful days when cattle roamed the open prairie.

Nancy Deaver, the leading lady who plays opposite Buck Jones in "The Trail Rider" has been on the stage since she was a wee bit of a toddler. Besides acting ability, she has been endowed with beauty, as may be judged when the production comes to the Liberty.

In Chicago a man named Mr. Half got married. Which is one time you can say he and his wife are one.

For the commission, W. P. Ellis, assistant attorney general, declared it was not opposed to the Southern Pacific, except as its proposals were adverse to the public interest.
