

Plays And Players In World's Series Spectacle

Herewith is presented a series of pictures of baseball stars in action today, in the final game of the most spectacular world's series in history.

The series has been unique, both from the standpoint of offensive hitting and superb defensive fielding, one of the said fielding feats now being the source of a disagreement.

When Rice picked a homer out of the bleachers and headed off a run it was promptly alleged that the ball had hit the stand first. Despite the fact that affidavits were produced the ruling of the umpire will prevail.

That Walter Johnson, star of the series, will retire after this season and seek the management of a Pacific Coast club is considered likely, especially in view of his activities on the coast last season.

With 41,000 spectators packing the stands, Washington and Pittsburgh opened the 1925 World Series at Pittsburgh. Here is Carey, Pittsburgh outfielder, going down after being hit on the arm by one of Walter Johnson's fast balls in the first inning. He was given a big hand when, after a few minutes time out, he was able to continue in the game. (NEA Telephotograph).
