

You'll enjoy the deeper, richer flavors that only "aging" can bring

When you taste S & W Coffee you'll experience an unexpected coffee flavor. You pause to contemplate its individual character.

Soon your palate learns the secret. Familiar coffee flavors come to you with added depth and richness—mellowness and satisfaction that linger pleasantly.

You have enjoyed the full goodness natural to fine coffees but which must be developed by slow aging, in the tropics, before the coffee is shipped and roasted. That is the reason for S & W individuality.

Aged coffees are scarce because the great demand for coffee takes nearly all of it away from the tropics much too soon. But adequate supplies are secured for S & W Coffee. To a blend of these rare aged coffees is added just a discreet dash of the new to emphasize a little the rich flavor of the aged.

Try S&W: Its goodness grows upon you as you continue using it. Like every S&W Product, it represents the best possible to produce. It must uphold the S&W reputation for extraordinary excellence.

S&W—Proverbial!
Wherever and whenever housewives speak or think of extraordinary goodness and value in canned fruits, vegetables and other foods, the name S&W comes first to mind. Over a quarter century's unvarying adherence to the best that can be produced, is the reason for S&W preference.

S&W FINE FOOD PRODUCTS

The Nationalzeitung is conducting a symposium on the question, is it proper for women to smoke. Replies thus far received indicate that German opinion on this momentous issue is about equally divided. Some of those who have contributed to the discussion implore the ladies of Germany not to ruin their beautiful teeth, while others deny that smoking has detrimental effects if the teeth are properly cared for. Some assert that to be kissed by a woman who smokes is no joy for most men.

SEEK TESTING OF CONTROL WORK OF PINE BEETLES

Charles King of Long - Bell Lumber Company Is to Make Comparison

"Is the present method pursued in the pine beetle control work, a success?"

By comparison, Charles King, veteran field timber superintendent of the Long Bell Lumber company, will attempt to find out whether the control method of burning bark is practical.

The tract of timber abuts onto what is known as the Antelope Flat, tract owned by Long Bell interests, which has been subjected to rigid pine beetle control methods during the past few years. The past year on the central area practically no beetles have infested trees of the section.

To determine whether the eradication of the beetle on the tract is due to natural causes or to control methods, King, Patterson and McNeill will make a comprehensive survey of timber adjacent to the Antelope tract, which is subject to the same climatic conditions and insect life but which has not been the object of pine beetle control methods.

If beetles are found in abundance on the tract, success of the control methods will be indicated. The method followed is felling the infested tree, stripping the bark and burning it along the length of the tree trunk.
