Stewart's Daily Letter

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—Washington is America's only city of importance where fortune telling, in its various forms, goes on regularly, professionally, openly and uninterfered with by the law.
Since secrecy is unnecessary and publicity pays, in the realm of the occult as in most other fields, the fortune tellers advertise in the newspapers of the city.
Consequently, it's possible here, which it isn't where they must operate under cover, to form some idea as to their number.
Exact figures, to be sure, are unavailable. Suffice it to say, however, that the community is surprisingly large, and seemingly prosperous.

Of all the capital's seers and seeresses, Mme. Marcia probably is the best known, by virtue of the fact that she had ready access to the White House during part of two administrations, as practitioner of astrology—extraordinary to the then "first ladies in the land."
In late middle life, Mme. Marcia runs strongly to embonpoint. Of book learning, except such as relates to astrology, she has very little.

The Couzens committee has succeeded in getting very deep into the Internal Revenue Bureau's many secrets.
Its workings are vastly complicated, voluminous and mysterious. Thumb-screws, figuratively, are needed to compel its officials to talk.

WASHINGTON.—The suggestion that Senator Couzens' committee on investigation of the Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department be given a new lease of life when congress meets in December was received in administration circles in gloomy silence—no applause.
This committee was a source of much worry to the administration last year and the earlier part of the present one.
The Internal Revenue Bureau handles far more of the government's money than any other of its agencies, and if anything is wrong there it's apt to be writing on an exceedingly large scale.
Senator Couzens says plainly that such actually is the case—perhaps not that there's punishable dishonesty but that the system lends itself to grave abuses and that these abuses do indeed exist.

WASHINGTON.—Crafty M. Callaux! He managed to give the impression that he wanted to arrange payment of France's debt to America, only America wouldn't let him. He came over and negotiated. He couldn't get the terms he'd hoped for. He didn't like to appear to be ending the discussion, so he placed the Washington government in the position of seemingly to do it.
He let the story leak out that he and Secretary Mellon had reached an agreement. In reality they hadn't.
But the story was printed and the government had to deny it.
Just before the denial was issued Senator Smoot told the correspondents that a statement was coming.
"What will it be?" asked the correspondents.
Senator Smoot (grimly): "The truth"—this time. No, Senator Smoot didn't say "this time," but he acted like that was what he meant.
Well, Mr. Callaux couldn't stay any longer. Tway he went, leaving America hardly as near to getting her money as she was in the first place.

The first night the three or four hundred delegates to the Interparliamentary Union convention spent here, most of them left their foot-wear outside their doors to be polished while they slumbered, after the European fashion.
The hotel help did the polishing all right, but, not being used to that kind of thing, got the shoes mixed up in redistributing them.
They do say it was a sight to behold and an earful to listen to, when those delegates undertook to sort them out in the morning, quarreling over them in 41 different languages.

Couzens was handicapped by the presence on his committee of a couple of members who didn't want him to learn anything.
And just as he had the lid fairly off and was proceeding to take out what was inside, the committee's authority to continue its tasks ended, with the 68th congress' adjournment.

The chances are that administration senators in combating Couzens may indulge in a few personalities. They may point to the fact that Mellon paid an income tax of more than $1,000,000 and that Couzens, admittedly the possessor of several millions, paid a tax of only $1200.

The Old Guard senators are likely to suggest that the country might be interested in knowing just how a man with so much wealth as Couzens could get his tax so low.
Of course, Couzens' honesty in filing a return is not challenged in the least, but as a means of checkmating his activities they may attempt to turn the investigation to the question of tax-exempt securities—the favorite tax reducing method of millionaires.

WASHINGTON.—In two respects American statesmen show to a disadvantage in company with European public men.
They're less mindful of sartorial correctness. They don't know languages. This was brought out very conspicuously at the recent gathering of the Interparliamentary Union here.

The American delegates dressed well enough. Their suits were brushed and pressed and fit better than the Europeans'. Practically without exception they wore ordinary sacks, with soft felt hats and tan shoes, as often as not.
The Europeans, equally almost without exception, never appeared in anything less than the fullest "morning dress"—cutaway, pearl gray trousers, plus hat, patent leathers and spats, gloves, monocle in more than a few cases—the whole regalia.
With the women it was just the reverse. Many of the foreign delegates had their wives with them.
For style they were nowhere, compared with their hostesses—at least, according to American ideas.
The Latin, among the visiting women, came the nearest to measuring up to the requirements of American tastes in dress, but even the gowns of these appeared to awaken no feelings of envy, so far as feminine Washington was concerned.

Linguistic difficulties were noticeable also at the Interparliamentary Union's more formal sessions. A speech doesn't make much impression if only 1-41st part of the audience understands it.
In translation it loses punch. Besides, 40 translations take time.
As far as possible the proceedings were in English or French. Even that didn't give fully satisfactory results.
It means that the speakers had to express themselves, a large share of the time, in a tongue they were imperfectly acquainted with, to hearers who but partly understood them.
