WHO SHALL CONTROL?

Following instructions, the S. P.-Copeo mouthpiece, The Klamath News, has placed itself in opposition to the farmers of the county, just as it did when it joined hands with the Southern Pacific in the fight to keep out the Northern lines. In its issue of Sunday morning, it comes out in opposition to the candidacies of Joe Jacob and Lum Short, who are the farmers' candidates for directors of the Klamath Irrigation district. It claims to speak for "farmers of the Klamath Irrigation district who are dissatisfied," and who are opposed to Jacob and Short because "the present administration has utterly failed so to conduct the affairs of the district as to warrant their further continuance in power."

In conclusion it says that, "this election offers no issue other than an effort to make possible the business-like administration of the district's affairs."

The Klamath News knows that the issues in this campaign are entirely different. It knows that in raising the cry that "Bradbury is dominating the board," "failure to agree with the government," and the like, that it is simply carrying out the instructions of its masters, the California Oregon Power company and the Southern Pacific company, to do everything it can to confuse the issues and help to place the control of the board back into the hands of those who for years betrayed the farmers of the district. Just as the Klamath News attempted to deceive the people of the county when it supported the "Southern Pacific program," so it will now try to deceive the farmers of the Klamath Irrigation district during the present campaign. But it will fail.

The issues of this campaign are:

Shall the reclamation service turn over to the California Oregon Power company the water rights of the Klamath project, water rights that have cost the farmers hundreds of thousands of dollars and that are worth millions, without that corporation paying to the farmers their full value?

Shall the resolution, passed by the present board of directors of the Klamath Irrigation district, demanding that no right of way across the government land within the Klamath Irrigation district, be given to ANY railroad, unless it carries with it a common-user condition be set aside?

Bradbury and Jacob have steadfastly refused to consent to any move upon the part of the reclamation service that would weaken the district's title to the water rights. They foresightedly passed the common-user resolution, a move that will insure to the people of the Klamath, Merrill and Tule lake valleys railroad competition, as well as the certainty of the construction of a through line to a connection with the Central Pacific and the Western Pacific. Jacob is standing for reelection. This is his first year on the board and he made a record that will stand the closest scrutiny. Never for a moment has he failed to stand up for the rights of the farmers. His one thought has ever been to protect their interests and how well he has succeeded is evidenced by the opposition to his reelection. With Jacob is standing as a candidate R. C. Short. Throughout the district he is better known as "Lum" Short, a nickname of affection bestowed upon him by his friends and neighbors. Those who know him best are his strongest supporters. Of sterling integrity, practical experience and unusual ability, he will be a tower of strength to the new board, giving it three members who will labor with the single purpose of preventing the theft of the resources of the project, as well as creating such conditions as will insure its rapid and harmonious development.

DREW DEFENDS POWER COMPANY

When Secretary Work was here, the directors of the district had just concluded a plea for an adjustment of the value of the water that was being used by the Power company. Taking up the discussion, Secretary Work concluded his remarks as follows:

"The policy of the reclamation service is to maintain the 'open door policy.' We are operating on that basis. Anybody can come in and present their matters and be heard. No personal feeling whatever. We just want to work with you and try to find a way out. Your hand is in the dog's mouth, all right. The first job is to get it out safely, and that is what I am interested in."

At this point Charles Drew, who is a candidate for election to the board of directors of the Klamath Irrigation district, arose in the audience, and after telling the secretary who he was and what official capacity he occupied, he said:

"I wish to state that we have never had a shortage of water on account of the Power company, and I am sure that a great many of the water users are in favor of having nothing to do with power. It is irrigation we want and not power. I think the majority of the waterusers are opposed to having trouble with the Power company. I think the Power company is all right."

The above is reproduced from a stenographic report of the hearing before Secretary Work, when that official was here last summer.

Mr. Drew was at that time a member of the board of directors of the Irrigation district, having been elected by the members of the old board to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of one of the members.

Young Men Are Arrested Near Malin Saturday

Floyd West and James Farrell were arrested Saturday night near Malin by County Traffic Officer R. E. Knowles on the charge of possession of intoxicating liquor. Knowles' attention to the young men was drawn by their driving in a coupe through the countryside without lights. When he attempted to stop them, they threw away a bottle. Knowles said. The officer recovered a bottle near the car which was full of moonshine whiskey. The pair was lodged in jail.

W. T. Cramer is charged with possession of 3 pints of whiskey. He was arrested by L. L. McBride, state prohibition agent Saturday.

According to reports received here at the sheriff's office this morning, the home of N. Dennis, near Malin, was raided yesterday by Merrill officers and Dennis arrested on a liquor charge. The report stated that Dennis was released when he put up a $500 bail.

Ben Gay, arrested Sunday afternoon on his farm near Worden, was released Saturday night when he raised a bond of $1000. A forty gallon still, hundreds of gallons of alleged mash and a quantity of alleged moonshine were confiscated by the prohibition officers who were led in the raid by State Prohibition Agent McBride.

Isn't it a pity you can't trade in your old summer suit on a new winter model?

Investigative Body Meeting This Morning

Grand Jury Goes Into Session; Many Important Matters

Behind a door on the second floor of the county court house today, indistinct sounds of voices in argumentation or debate, testified to the deliberations of the Klamath County grand jury which went into session this morning.

The investigative body will consider various felony charges which have been referred to it by the justice court, but beyond that, no linking of other matters of importance has been gleaned.

Personnel of the grand jury is as follows: E. M. Hammond, foreman; Merle Kilgore, clerk; Marshall Orr, F. H. McCornack, E. L. Hopkins, H. S. Wakefield and Walter Donart.

END TWO MONTHS' TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. Snow Back Home After Extended Vacation
Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Snow, 1536 Crockett avenue, returned on Saturday evening from an extended vacation trip through the middle west and northern California. They left Klamath early in September, going by the northern route to Montana, then St. Paul, visiting relatives in several points, including Iowa and Missouri, and returning by the D. and R. O. to Pasadena on the return journey. They were accompanied to Oregon from Odessa, Mo., by Mr. Snow's sister Fannie, who will remain in Klamath Falls to visit during the winter.

This was Mr. Snow's first visit to his old home in Missouri for nearly 20 years, and there was a great reunion with relatives in the old home. He says Klamath looks better than ever, though, after seeing so much desert country on the trip.

Some men are successful chiefly because they didn't have the advantages others had.

OUT OUT WAY

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—A flaming sword appeared in Washington's western sky one night recently. Then a second flaming sword. Then a third.

They hung all night over the city. It was pretty darned terrifying. The next night it happened again. Then more nights. Every night, in fact.

Indeed, it's still happening. It requires a certain amount of imagination to see the phenomena as flaming swords, but they're mysterious shafts of light anyway. Even unimaginative people can see them.

After they had appeared for several nights in succession, some of the imaginative ones began to feel frightened. Washington has a large colored population which is more or less superstitious.

A negro street exhorter preached a number of sermons about the swords. He said they were a dire portent for the capital. They were a puzzle to the most practical of folk.

News that numerous Washingtonians really were scared reached the ears of Professor Asaph Hall of the United States naval observatory.

"Those things," he announced, speaking as an astronomer, "are only searchlights. Don't be foolish."

"What searchlights?" asked everybody. Professor Hall had to admit that he didn't know. It was pointed out that searchlights bob around. The flaming swords are stationary.

Considerably piqued by popular skepticism toward his theory, Professor Hall did some investigating. Company C, 29th Engineers, Fort Humphreys, Va., he discovered, is surveying a 400-square-mile tract between Quantico and Warrenton, and the triangulating is being done at night by means of searchlights—a new method of the 29th's own invention, which gives results of the most marvellous mathematical accuracy.

WIERINGEN, EX-CROWN PRINCE'S EXILE, IS NOW JOINED TO MAINLAND

AMSTERDAM.—(7)—Wieringen, which achieved world-wide notoriety through the place of exile of the German ex-crown prince William, is an island no more.

It now forms part of the great Zuydersee drainage scheme. A newly laid dam 1 1/2 miles in length now unites Wieringen with the mainland. This is, however, only a small beginning. It may take Holland 20 years before realizing her ambition to add 1,000 square miles to her territory by reclaiming the Zuydersee, a project estimated to cost $140,000,000.

In both France and Germany inventors have developed machines operated by foot power with which they have raised themselves from the ground and flown short distances.

LONDON.—The girls have "naked arony" from short skirts and damp weather. To prevent such inflammations, physicians are recommending woolen stockings and long skirts.
