Ashland Road Will Be Open During Winter

Improved Highways to Be Cleared of Snow Drifts

However furious the storm god may rage, automobile traffic over the Ashland-Klamath Falls highway will continue throughout the winter unimpeded, C. C. Kelley, division state highway engineer, announced this morning.

What is more, there is a very favorable chance that the road between Bend and Klamath Falls will be kept open during the winter.

So far as the Klamath Falls-Lakeview highway is concerned, responsibility of winter maintenance of the state highway department discontinues at the end of the improved section, Bonanza. If the counties desire to keep the Lakeview highway open from Bonanza east, they must maintain it themselves.

Heavier equipment has been secured to take care of the winter maintenance work on the Green Springs mountain, where the snow will fall the heaviest on the highway to Ashland, Mr. Kelley said. This equipment will meet any emergency that may arise.

Work As It Snows

Policy of the maintenance department of the state highway department is to start clearing the roads of snow just as soon as the snow begins to fall. It has been found that an accumulation on the road renders harder work in the end.

One group of workmen last winter worked for 72 consecutive hours with practically no rest or respite, in their effort to keep the road open for scores of automobiles that were speeding to or from Klamath Falls.

Little trouble in maintaining the highway from Klamath Falls to Bonanza and from Klamath Falls south to Merrill on the Dalles-California highway, is anticipated by the highway department. No stretch of this road climbs up into the mountainous regions, where snow fall is heavy and long. On the contrary they proceed through the farming country of the Klamath basin, which is least affected by the winter snow.

More Maintenance

The highway department must maintain 30 more miles of macadamized road this winter than last, Mr. Kelley pointed out ten miles from the Fort Klamath junction north-west to Anna Creek Lumber company mill; 20 miles due north from Fort Klamath junction on the Dalles-California highway to a point above Sand creek. Last year and the year before last this section was maintained by the United States Bureau of Public Roads. On November 1, according to prearranged agreement, their obligation to maintain these sections ceased and was taken up by the state highway department.

Sand Creek Difficult

The most difficult section to open will be the Sand Creek hill, just north of the junction. To meet this hazard, the state highway department has rented a large tractor which will haul a wedge shaped snow plow.

"What is really needed for that section is a rotary snow plow, but as we haven't one, we must get along as best we can without it," Mr. Kelley said.

The tractor and wedge plow will be used to clear the snow from roads in the Klamath Agency, Fort Klamath and Sand Creek sections.

Concerning keeping the road open to Bend, Mr. Kelley said:

Open to Bend

"There is 77 miles of macadam road from Klamath Falls north that is now completed. That will take the motorist to a point a mile or so north of Beaver marsh. From there on work is now progressing on a 28 mile grading section, which will be completed this winter. If the stages have any luck they can keep this section open during the winter."

At the PINE TREE

A very well-balanced vaudeville bill will be presented at the Pine Tree tonight, in addition to Pola Negri's latest picture, "The Charmer." Crowden's Chums is an unusual dog act, one of the sort that convinces you that dogs can surely act and reason. Bob Marshall is one of the best in his line and is always amusing. Kerns & Kerns have a versatile act and specialize in harmony and dancing. Miller & Ivers have a clever blackface act called "Darktown Frivolities." The headliners are Babe Dupre & Co., in a trip to Harmony Land, and this alone is well worth the price of admission.

CANNED FOOD WEEK

Committee consisting of A.E. Brigham, chairman, W. P. Fell, E. L. Keeney and J. O. Holt, are today making preparations for presenting before the public the necessity of observing national canned food week. The special week starts Monday. Several civic groups have volunteered to observe the special period with appropriate programs and dinners, consisting only of canned foods.

One of the main purposes of the special week is to arouse interest among the public in regard to methods of canning food, and what part canned goods play in feeding the large mass of people. It is announced by the local committee.

Local grocerymen and food dealers will have special window displays and advertising in general will be along the nature of broadcasting to the public information relative to the purpose of the week.

At present the canned goods industry buys about $300,000,000 worth of materials annually, it is pointed out. The industry produces more than 200 varieties, the committee states.

Autoists Protest Against Blockade

(Special to The Herald.)

YREKA, Calif., Nov. 4.—Tourists and business men, north and south bound, are protesting violently at the so-called "booze" blockade that was established last week at the juncture of the Pacific and the Green Springs highways, seven miles south of Ashland, by federal and Oregon state prohibition agents.

No exceptions are made, it is said by the squad of ten men, who stop every motorist as he comes along, and politely but emphatically insist on searching the motorist's person as well as his automobile for contraband liquor.

The blockade is said to be the result of protests by Ashland and Medford prohibition advocates and so far three men have been arrested, several thousand cars, however, having been searched.

The men are M. F. Keyser, of San Francisco, J. L. McCormick of Redding and E. Dalin of Santa Rosa. The total amount taken from the three netted two quarts of wine and less than a pint of moonshine and gin. The men were cited to appear yesterday before Justice of the Peace L. A. Roberts at Ashland and they were released on individual bail of $50. Not one of the trio appeared for trial and the bail was forfeited.

How long the blockade will continue is a mystery but the protests that reach Yreka are loud and long and threats of boycotting Ashland and Medford by tourists during the 1926 season are freely made.

Bootlegger Gets Severe Sentence

(Special to The Herald.)

YREKA, Calif., Nov. 4.—For having three gallons of moonshine in his possession at the logging camps of the Weed Lumber company at Tennant, J. P. Valle was fined $100 and sentenced to serve 15 days in the jail here. Deputy Constable E. R. Pritchett of Tennant arrested Valle and, following his conviction, brought Valle here.

At The LIBERTY

A real cowboy on a real horse; with the whistling wind of the unfenced range in their faces and great deeds to dare and do! What more could any lover of western melodrama ask than this combination, which comes to the Liberty Theater tonight under the title "The Ridin' Comet." With Yakima Canutt in the saddle, and one of the greatest horses under him that ever graced such a world's champion rider and roper, this picture has a fine start to be thrilling entertainment. And thrilling it is; with one of the finest and most compelling horse stories that was ever told. The race of "Meadowlark" (played by "Babe," Canutt's fine sorrel) to save the life of the man who has befriended her; the swimming of the angry, swollen, rushing river where the bridge is swept out; and "Babe's" battle with a mountain lion are three things which alone would make this an outstanding picture.
