Don't go after that bite "hammer and tongs"

Don't jump on your poor suffering pipe and yank his head off 'cause he bites your tongue half in two . . . The old boy's just showing his wisdom teeth—wise-cracking about your rank tobacco . . . But try this treatment: Drill the cavity out and put in Wellman's 1870 filling [that's Granger Rough Cut] . . . This operation 'll be 100 per cent successful and never again will your old pipe pull any more of that "biting sarcasm."

Wellman's Method removes all harshness and bite

Wellman's famous old 1870 mellowing method not only takes all trace of bitterness and bite out of tobacco, but brings it to a mild, spicy richness. There's no other method like it, nor any other tobacco like Granger.

History Of Tree Planting In Klamath County Is Compiled

By MAYBELLE LEAVITT

Klamath county's tree history doesn't carry the student back much further than the year 1884. It is true there were a few semi-mature trees scattered here and there at that time, but not in such profusion that the scene grew monotonous to the eyes of the wayfarer. As late as 1881 there were comparatively few settlers in and around Linkville, now the City of Klamath Falls, who believed the country good for anything but cattle grazing. In fact there was a belief that amounted almost to a superstition that nothing would grow here planted by the hand of man. This included trees as well as alfalfa.

One of the first men to dispell this idea and pave the way to the present campaign to make the city beautiful and attractive by means of shade trees was Steven Stukel, father of Fred Stukel a resident of Merrill. It is within the memory of our citizens as Rufus S. Moore, Captain O. C. Applegate and Judge A. L. Leavitt that the small Stukel orchard, planted on what is known to our generation as the Enterprise ranch, stands out as a pioneer in furthering the spirit of cultivation in their beloved county.

The heavy old poplar trees lining the Wilson Lane, as it approaches the Lost River dam, were carried here by William Steel and G. W. J. Wilson from Big Valley, Modoc county, California. Those two men made this long and, what was then an arduous journey, into Big Valley especially for the cuttings which were to ultimately develop into beautiful shade for farmers in the Klamath Basin.

The towns people took quite a pride in their court house yard when the poplar trees planted in 1893 by County Judge J. S. Orr, grew to a size where they were something more than switches. And this morning, just about 32 years later, those having occasion to visit the seat of county business were greeted by a row of holly trees which were planted Wednesday evening along the walk leading to the main entrance. These perky little holly trees are the present County Court's reply to the plea of the tree planting campaign committee.

Paul O. Landry is again urging that any one wishing to plant trees either this fall or in the spring put an order this month through the chamber of commerce and thus take advantage of the reduction price which is to be allowed on tree orders, if a large enough number of trees are bought from any one nursery.

Gould was arrested by T. M. Talbot, special investigator with the Douglas county fire patrol, and according to Supervising Warden H. Q. YOUTH WOUNDED

Marshall Collier, 14 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Collier of Catching inlet, had a narrow escape from an almost fatal injury when his gun discharged striking him in the leg. The young boy was out rounding up the cattle and as he crossed a log he slipped and his gun fell out of his hand accidentally discharging. The bullet passed through his leg and he was rushed to Wesley hospital but the wound was not a bad one. He was able to return home today. — Coos Bay Times.
