EVERETT TRUE By CONDO KID STARKEY IS LUCKY (Continued From Page One) Ing when his name was called for the bout with Tommy Murphy and he appears to have acted wisely. Murphy having all the appearance of a rapid-fire gun in action. Dummy Poole substituted for Allen without preparation and put up a game, clever fight, getting a good draw. Both fighters were tired out at the end of the bout. Murphy punished Poole's body terrifically at the beginning of the bout. Henry Burke, making his second appearance as a boxer, was handicapped by a thrown-out right shoulder and got all the worst of it in the two rounds he endured with Jim Fleming. The feature of the bout was Henry's reversion to type when he tackled Fleming and upset him for a loss on the ten-yard line. Fleming kicked, the crowd roared, and Burke apologized. This bout was comedy throughout, for everyone but Burke. The Getaway The village improvident was observed dithering with an automobile salesman for an expensive motor. "What do you mean," asked a candid friend, "by buying a big, fast car when you can't even pay your bills?" "That," admitted the improvident, "is the main reason I am buying a big, fast car."
