Ray Kremer Goes Back to Factory

When Ray Kremer returns to the Pacific coast this winter he will receive a warm welcome from his friends and former associates of the Star factory. The big pitcher, who did more than any one other player to land the world series for the Pittsburgh Pirates last year, is due back in Oakland in a few weeks. His arrival here will be the signal for a lot of activities on the part of the Durant Motor company of California officials.

Martin Heath of department 50, the motor assembly department in which Kremer worked, while associated with the Star plant, has already arranged for a barbecue to be held in Dublin canyon in Kremer's honor. This banquet will be attended by the men who worked with Kremer, by the officials of the Durant company plant here and by Kremer's friends in the Oakland Coast league team in which he played before Pittsburgh drafted him two years ago.

Kremer made many friends at the Star factory during his period of service there. These friends followed his career with the Oaks enthusiastically and have watched his progress in the major league since his departure from the coast.

When the big fellow had his chance in this year's world series and when he proved himself the outstanding star of the Pirate team by pitching them to victory and the pennant, there was wild enthusiasm at the Star factory. Martin Heath sent numerous wires of congratulation on behalf of his associates and informed Kremer that "a big party in the canyon" was awaiting the baseball hero on his return to California.

Studebaker Auto Is Amazing France

"But, Messieurs, it is impossible; it cannot be that you can do it when you manufacture so many cars!"

Though they saw the task being performed as a regular, routine part of automobile building, the engineering staff of the foremost French motor car manufacturer, could not believe that American manufacture in quantity could do such careful work. They were watching a deft-fingered girl in the Studebaker factory at South Bend, Ind., grading connecting rods. They saw her put them, lengthwise, on a special balancing scale and sort them into sets of six, each being matched for weight. Each set was for one particular engine.

The object was to make sure that when fastened to the perfectly balanced crankshaft, machined on all sides to obtain inherent balance, one connecting rod would not be heavier than the others and thus unbalance the assembly, even by a small amount.

The French engineers, who had the impression American manufacturers just stamped out automobiles with a punch press, were amazed to learn that such infinite pains were resorted to, that the product should be as near mechanically perfect as ingenuity could devise.

Nor did their surprise lessen when they learned that 1200 separate inspectors made more than 30,000 individual inspections before a Studebaker car ran off the assembly line completed. Nothing like this, they declared existed in Europe, even in custom built car factories.

Nor could they understand how a manufacturer could afford it, until they were shown that it was paid for out of the savings which other works would have gone as profits to parts makers. This company manufactures all the vital parts of its automobile which is what Studebaker means by "one profit" manufacture.

YORKSHIRE VILLAGE DESTINED FOR BOTTOM OF SEA

KILNSEA, Eng.—This ancient little village appears destined for the bottom of the ocean, a fate experienced by other Yorkshire towns of centuries past. The sea for some time has been working its way toward Kilnsea at the rate of about 13 inches a month. Coast erosion, due to high seas, has been causing concern all along the east Yorkshire coast. It is being washed away at the rate of 2.27 feet per annum near Bridlington, increasing to 15.5 feet at Kilnsea, is near Spear Point.

LONDON—Because of Queen mother Alexandra's death, members of the American society are going to send turkey imported for Thanksgiving to hospitals instead of eating it themselves.
