A Substantial City Residence

Six-Room House No. 637

Designed for American Face Brick Association

THE architect of the house illustrated above had especially in mind the needs of a family with a comparatively narrow city lot, and this is, incidentally, one of the hardest problems an architect has to meet. It is relatively a simple matter to design a house that is going to have an effective setting and where there is plenty of ground room. The possibilities for a house on a narrow lot are, however, restricted.

In this instance, the architect has designed a simple, substantial exterior that has a real dignity. The wall surfaces lend themselves to a great variety of pattern treatment in the brickwork. The color and texture of the brick will also contribute materially to the appearance of the house.

A study of the floor plans will at once reveal the fact that nothing has been omitted to make a modern home. The main rooms are large, the living room opening on one side to a screened porch, while a sun parlor opens from the dining room, to which space is added by a good bay, useful for flowers and the like.

The kitchen is well lighted and ventilated, with the windows over the sink on one side and the built-in breakfast nook on the other. The refrigerator is placed in the pantry and iced from outside. There is a connection from the kitchen to the front hall passing the lavatory, coat closet, and basement stairs, and giving convenient access to the front door.

On the second floor are three large bedrooms, all well lighted and ventilated, an ample bathroom, and numerous closets. Stairways to the attic and to the kitchen are very desirable features.

The basement contains heater and fuel room, laundry drying space, vegetable cellar and a garbage incinerator. There is an outside entrance to the basement.

With a driveway at one side as shown, forty-five to fifty feet would be the minimum lot. The first floor is well above the ground, giving good basement light.

The ceiling heights are 8 feet 6 inches, and the content 38,520 cubic feet.
