REMEMBER YOUR FRIENDS

What would think of a person for whom you had made a great sacrifice if he repaid your help by doing you an injury? We are a great believer in the doctrine that if one smites you on the right cheek, turn the left; but if he smites you on the left cheek, then the Good Lord help him. That is why we ask every reader of the Evening Herald to remember their friends during your holiday shopping. If you have a dollar to spend, spend it with those who have tried to help you by helping the community. Spend it with the business man who has risked much that he might help you at least a little. You are making no sacrifice when you spend your money with him, but you are showing that you have the right spirit, you are showing that you are giving to others what you expect for yourself and you are telling that business man that when he stands with the community the community will stand with him. And that brings us to the chief point we want to make:

You will find the names of your business friends in the columns of the Evening Herald. The Evening Herald is not a subsidized newspaper. It has no special interests to serve except those of all the people. Its advertisers understand this and never try to influence its policies one way or the other. When they do they cease to be advertisers. This paper is your paper and its advertisers should be your advertisers. As such you owe it to them—to yourself—to spend your money where it will come back to you an hundredfold.

FEDERAL SABOTAGE

If you talk to the reclamation service bureaucrats and mention anything about radicalism, you will immediately touch a subject that will bring forth a well-spring of condemnation of all those who disagree with our present form of government. One of the favorite words with these people is sabotage. It means boring from within; malicious destruction of property; any act of vindictive injury to the employer, for the purpose of wrecking his business or making it unprofitable. In a word, it means the carrying on of a campaign that has for its ultimate purpose the destruction of something of value, with the object in view of acquiring that thing through the ultimate bankruptcy of the owner or owners.

That is what the reclamation service is doing to the Klamath drainage district. It is carrying on a campaign of sabotage against the lands in the district for the purpose of destroying public confidence in their value, thus hoping to make the sale of the district bonds impossible. If this could be done, the district would be without the money to carry on its program of reclamation, the contract with the government would be violated and the reclamation service would have the excuse it is seeking to open the gates and flood the land.

It is the plan that inspired the article in the Klamath News, the mouthpiece of the California Oregon Power company, to suggest in its editorial of yesterday that "bird lovers may some day realize their desire to have lower Klamath lake flooded?" Was it inspiration that caused it further to say "but JUST NOW the United States is bound by solemn contract with the Klamath drainage district to keep the waters out of the lake bed?" Was it inspiration that caused it to say that "until such time as the district is unable to live up to the contract, the reclamation service will have no moral right or legal authority to flood the lake?" Was it inspired to further say that "when that time comes some modification of the contract may be sought?"

Continuing the Klamath News says, in speaking of the reclamation service: "It has done no more to date than to inquire into the premises under pressure of national field sportsmen's organizations." It is well understood that the Audobon Society, whose voice has been quite strident in demanding the re-flooding of the lower Klamath lake, is controlled by the so-called Power trust. It is a mere tool in the hands of those corporations that are seeking to gain, or maintain, their grip upon the resources of the public lands and federal water power of the nation, and when it steps into the limelight, you will find that it is but voicing the demands of its masters.

The reclamation service has no business interfering with the Klamath Drainage district. Only one thing should interest it—is the drainage district living up to the terms of the contract? Instead, it has done everything it can do to destroy the confidence the public must have in the enterprise to make it a success. It has practiced sabotage of the most subtle character and it has been the active agent of those whose financial interests demand that the lower lake be reflooded in order that it act as a temporary storage place for the flood waters that otherwise would be wasted down the Klamath river.

Notwithstanding this campaign on the part of the reclamation service, as well as the other agents of the Power crowd, the Klamath Drainage district has proven beyond a reasonable doubt the value of the land. It has demonstrated that the land is productive, that it will pay big interest on the investment and that it is going to be one of the greatest sources of wealth tributary to Klamath Falls. It is the duty of every citizen of the county to stand back of it and aid in bringing to an end this campaign of federal sabotage.

Did it ever Happen to You

MODOC POINT

Bacterial Tests of Klamath Dairy Herds Advocated

A bacterial test of dairy herds each month and the formation of a Dairy association to promote and guarantee the tests was the proposition submitted to a group of the larger Klamath dairymen in the city hall this afternoon by Dr. E. D. Lamb, deputy dairy and food commissioner. The proposition was met with favor by the dairymen although up to 3 p. m. no decision had been made to form an organization.

It was felt by some of the dairymen that the samples of milk for bacterial tests should be taken just before the milk reaches the consumer, rather than in the dairy barnyard. They pointed out that milk could become unclean in its handling by the distributor, and the dairymen would not be to blame.

Dr. Lamb quoted interesting figures on the Klamath dairy industry. There are 529 cows which serve the milk needs of Klamath

House Begins Debate On Tax

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10. —(AP)—The novelty of having in its hands a $324,000,000 tax reduction bill, had worn off somewhat today and the house proceeded more perfunctorily to pass away the allotted time for debate on the measure.

Republicans and democrats continued generally to endorse the measure as a whole, but various expressions of individual disapproval over certain of its phases were put into the record.

Representative Watson of Pennsylvania, republican member of the ways and means committee, supported the bill, but deplored the failure to provide for repeal of the inheritance tax.

A revision of the inheritance rates would be provided as the bill stands. Representative Collier of Mississippi, a democrat member of the ways and means committee, told the house that the measure should include repeal of the taxes on automobile passenger cars and capital stock.

BELOVED PIONEER DIES

MEDFORD, Ore., Dec. 10.—Mrs. Mary Ann Vincent, 83 years old, known to many in southern Oregon at "Grandma" Vincent, died today at her old home in San's valley, where she has lived steadily for the past 54 years.

Falls. Of this number 310 are at this time giving a total of 920 gallons of milk each day. This, it is said, makes the average per capita milk consumption each day, one half of a pint.

Out Our Way

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON—The average man probably will say $17,500 is a pretty good yearly income. An income's sufficiency, however, depends on how its recipient has to live. "Has" to live? Can't he live to suit himself? Not always. An ambassador, among others, has got to live up to his job. "Got" is the word. His style of living is a matter concerning which a diplomat has no choice.

That's why the United States diplomatic service is a service for rich men exclusively. This isn't necessarily true of the consular service. A consul hasn't a plenipotentiary's social obligations. It isn't true of foreign diplomats in America. Most of them draw two, three or four times the pay ours do. Our ministers at a very few modest capitals do manage to live on their salaries. But generally speaking it spells ruin for a man without large financial resources of his own to accept a foreign post under our government.

The ambassador, or minister, isn't the only one whose official income won't support him. His whole staff of secretaries and attaches are in the same fix. Their expenses aren't as high as their chiefs' but neither are their salaries.

This is no argument in favor of higher diplomatic salaries. Most American diplomats are dead willing to foot ambassadorial bills for the honor they get out of it. They can afford it, too, or they wouldn't be foolish enough to accept appointments. In these days of rapid communication ambassadors and ministers aren't as important as they used to be, anyway.

It's a rich man's game, however. There's no getting away from it.

Farmers Name New President

CHICAGO, Dec. 10. —(AP)—The American Farm Bureau federation has chosen as its new president, B. H. Thompson of Quincy, Ill., a leader of the forces advocating a federal export corporation, and a critic of President Coolidge's agricultural speech made here last Monday.

The convention also passed a resolution favoring the enactment of a federal law based on the farmers' export corporation principle. This resolution, the last on a list of 37, was the first to be passed after Mr. Thompson's election had done away with prospects of a strenuous fight on the subject. E. A. O'Neil of Montgomery, Ala., was re-elected vice president and a new board of directors was named in a session lasting into the early morning hours.

Mr. Thompson, who for the last three years has been president of the Illinois farmers' organization, defeated O. E. Bradford of Xenia, O., who had occupied the position for three years. The new president's term will be for two years at an annual salary of $12,500.

The export corporation law advocated by the organization is similar to the McNary Haugen measure, rejected by congress.

Aggies Debate With U. Of O.

EUGENE, Ore., Dec. 10. — The first debate of the forensic schedule for the university, held yesterday afternoon at Corvallis and Eugene, resulted in a tie for the second time in two years. The affirmative team, which debated in Villard hall here yesterday afternoon for Oregon won from the O. A. C. negative team by a unanimous vote. The Oregon negative team lost at Corvallis by the same unanimous decision to Oregon Agricultural college.

Benot McCroskey and Deryl V. Ludington of the Oregon affirmative team, advocating that the nations immediately relinquish governmental control in China, won easily from Frank De Spain and Mark Evans, upholding the negative.

Before two thirds of the entire O. A. C. student body, which numbered more than 2,000, a meeting at which Governor Pierce was the presiding chairman, the university team, composed of Herschel Brown and Jack McQuire, was defeated decisively by the Aggie affirmative team, made up of Blair Stewart and Harold Ball.

JURY IS OUT

At 3 o'clock this afternoon a jury of 12 men was still deliberating in the case of State vs. Ben Gay, charged with operating a moonshine still in the vicinity of his ranch near Warden. The case was turned over to the jury at 12:30 p. m.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS

Just a big pile o' bills, and little more of importance, met the county school board as they convened in the county school superintendent's office this afternoon for their regular session. The last meeting of the board was held two weeks ago, a special session at which the report of the county school budget committee was approved.

At the PINE TREE

A novel program of music, songs, stories, comedy and mirth by masters of the vaudeville world and put over in an able manner at your favorite amusement resort, the Pine Tree Theater, is the attraction tonight.

The Clark Brothers, triple horizontal bar experts, have been known for years as best in their class. They combine the element of thrill with new and novel tricks. New tricks are few and far between, but the Clark Brothers are an exception to the rule. Emerald Four are real singers of real harmony songs. Everyone likes good singing and for that reason we have no hesitancy in saying The Emerald Four will be a rare treat. Their yodelling numbers are one of the outstanding features of the show.

George and Nettie Foster in "Hockshop, the Detective," a comedy singing, talking, and eccentric dancing act, built for and showing the humorous side of an up-to-date detective life and peculiar habits, a burlesque presentation.

Wellbaum and Marco, a comedy musical duo, present an act that will more than please on its merits. Their singing and comedy is of the unctuous sort and never fails to win applause. They are in a class by themselves. Ross Wright, xylophonist supreme, in syncopated melodies. Love's of the best in music are found in their praise of this skilled musical artist.

The picture is "The Red Lily."
