

NEW ORDINANCES ARE CONSIDERED

Legislation Affecting Street Closing and City Park Transfer Comes up

Two ordinances of paramount importance to the future development of Klamath Falls were given their initial push toward final passage by the city council last night.

One is the street closing ordinance which was passed to its second reading; the other an ordinance authorizing the sale of the Riverside park property to the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Trunk Line.

Dominating feature of the street closing law, was the presence in the ordinance which was read, of Third street, which according to the proposed legislation, will be vacated south from Klamath avenue.

The street closing ordinance, finds its source in the Lorenz Plumbing company. This concern, which is the holding company for the Klamath Heating company desired to have certain streets vacated in the vicinity of south First, Second and Third streets. They state they wish to have sufficient room to make an expansion which will be of public benefit.

At the last meeting, the bone of contention among the council, or at least four members of that body, was whether or not Third street should be included. G. C. Lorenz, frankly admitted to the council at that time, that without Third street closed the development would be decidedly hampered.

Stuckey and Roberts announced their opposition to closing Third street. The other three members of the council were silent, and so the street closing issue was deferred until another meeting of the council.

Oregon Trunk railroad, through its representative G. B. Richmond, renewed its offer for approximately two acres of the South Riverside park property.

The council decided to pass an ordinance empowering the mayor to sell both pieces of property, the one of two acres to the Oregon Trunk railroad company, the other to the Southern Pacific company. This ordinance will clear away the last legal obstacle to the transfer of the city property to the railroads.
