Auto Smash ups and Business Losses Occur When Someone Forgets The Other Fellow

John Jones may be either a townsman or a farmer. John gets prosperous and buys a new car.

Proud of his new possession and intent upon gratifying his own pleasure, out he goes on the public highway, and—temporarily forgetting the other fellow—steps hard on the gas. CRASH!

TOO MUCH SPEED—COULDN'T STOP IN TIME

Yes, it was tragical. As John lies on his cot at the hospital hopelessly crippled, his physical pain is nothing compared to the mental anguish as he thinks of the fatherless children and the wife of his victim—a human life needlessly sacrificed. Another prosperous Klamath Falls citizen is just as thoughtless—in a different way.

He likes to trade out of town. Not that it costs him less or that he secures better merchandise, for a careful tabulation of costs would convince him that, dollar for dollar, he can buy to better advantage here in Klamath Falls. But he doesn't figure it out.

He, too, is thoughtless. He forgets that loyalty to the home folks is not merely an ideal—but a sound business principle that pays cash dividends. He forgets that the business men of Klamath Falls are valuable assets to this community—that they are real service-factors—and that their ability to serve depends upon his hearty support.

He forgets, too, that every dollar he sends or takes away impoverishes and cripples the whole community—of which he and his family is a living part.
