Terrific Battle Ends With Miner Welterweight Champ

Pete Latzo, Coal Field Product, Whips Mickey Walker in Surprising Upset; Last Two Rounds a Slugging Match

SCRANTON, Pa., May 21. —(AP)—Anthracite miners of the Wyoming valley, home of Pete Latzo, went into the earth today with smiles and bulging pockets—the fruits of an amazing contest.

Pete Latzo, 23 year old son of the miners, is welterweight boxing champion of the world. He got the decision in ten rounds last night over Mickey Walker of Elizabeth, N. J., a 2 to 1 favorite.

Walker, who won the crown by a decision over Jack Britton in New York three years ago, lost it in a desperate struggle before 12,000 spectators, most of them friends of Latzo.

Prayers said in the mining region for Latzo's victory were answered. The hunch of his bride that he would become champion were correct.

At times blood spurted from the faces of the combatants, but neither gave an inch. Toe to toe, one the product of the city and the other of the country, lashed out at each other, first one and then the other seeming to have the advantage.

Latzo had met Mickey before and suffered. But knowing that many a slender purse had been staked on his chances, Pete fought last night as never he had fought before. In the first round, blood came from his nose after a pounding at close quarters.

Latzo soon learned that he was fighting the champion's way and shortly he began to step away, to rush in and out with stabbing jolts to the head which time after time drove his adversary to the ropes.

In the fifth, Walker's short right opened a cut under the challenger's left eye, but Latzo rained blows and drove Walker to a corner.

From that time, the minor appeared gaining strength and courage, every charge was met with a shower of jolts, although he accepted terrific punches to head and body.

With miners standing on their chairs and shouting, the last two rounds were terrific, and the final bell found the boxers slugging away at each other with the referee trying to pry them apart. Two judges voted for Latzo and the consensus at the ringside gave him five of the ten rounds, Walker three and two even.

Latzo entered the ring under the name of "Young Clancy" seven years ago.

Last night's gate receipts were estimated at $90,000, of which Latzo's share was 17 per cent. Walker was guaranteed $30,000, or 37 1/2 per cent of the net receipts.

"Have a Camel"

Open one up! The tobacco tells its own story

CAMELS are made of the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos grown. To prove what we say about Camel's tobacco quality, make this test:

Take a Camel and any other cigarette. Tear off the papers and place the tobaccos from the two cigarettes in separate piles. Now shake them up and examine the tobaccos. Your own eyes will quickly show you the difference, how the Camel tobacco is longer and of a riper color. Then gather up the two piles separately—and smell them.

You will at once notice the rich, fragrant aroma of Camel tobaccos not found in the other.

This marked difference is even more apparent when you "taste the smoke." It is solely because of the quality of the tobaccos and the skill of the blending that Camels never tire the taste, never leave a cigaretty after-taste.

Camels are so good that we know you will like them. Give them every test known and you will find Camels the highest quality cigarette made, regardless of price. Have a Camel!
