Read this letter from one of my policy holders. Mr. Pastega is only one of many thousands who are being helped during their period of misfortune by the New York Life.

PELICAN CITY BAKERY
Pelican City June 30, 1926.

Dear Mr. Burke:
I saw your ad in the paper about the wonderful disability clause in your New York Life policy. I have thought many times that I should write you a letter to thank you and your great company for the way they have treated me. I got disabled in May last year and your company has been paying me $50 each month ever since that time. Besides, they returned me a premium that my wife had paid for me when I was sick and did not know that I did not have to pay for the policy. This year when my premium was due again the company sent me a receipt for the next year's premium and also sent me a check for a nice dividend. If I remain disabled all my life I will get $50 every month and at my death my wife will still get the $5000 insurance. It seems almost too good to be true, but I know it's true because the company has already done more for me than my policy even called for.
I surely feel that I ought to thank you for getting me to take out that policy. I hope you will have great success in your work of selling those fine policies in the New York Life.

Your friend,
EMILIO PASTEGA.

At the PINE TREE

Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore, supported by an all-star cast, are coming to the Pine Tree theater tonight in their latest picture, "Three Weeks in Paris."

Moore plays Oswald Bates, a diffident young groom who is sent to Paris on business immediately after he has been married. Miss Devore plays the deserted bride, who awaits his return hopefully and patiently.

Willard Louis is seen as a jovial soul who accompanies his friend Moore abroad, and sets the merry pace of adventure which lands them both in a Paris prison. Mr. Louis, ever since his characterization of the Prince of Wales in "Beau Brummel," has become one of the popular screen comedians noted for his subtlety and versatile portrayals.
