SETTLEMENT OF PUBLIC DOMAIN CAN NEVER BE

Expert Claims Huge Tract Would Not Respond to Development.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Jan. 28.—What remains of the public domain, amounting to nearly two hundred million acres "will not respond to settlement in the way of building houses, and the livestock industry cannot be stabilized and made safe under the present arrangement," Williams Peterson, director of the Utah Agricultural College, told members of the national livestock association.

The area of these public lands was shown to aggregate 195,943,284 acres, a net increase of nearly 10,000,000 acres over 1924.

The poration of the soldiers settlement act, which invited soldiers to enter upon the public domain has not made homes for soldiers in the manner for which the act was intended. Dr. Peterson said after reviewing the public land development from the close of the civil war, when land script was issued by the government to the veterans of that conflict.

What remains of the public domain, or what has been offered the soldier under recent congressional legislation, will not maintain a family, the speaker continued. "A man could not establish a home and get a living from the 640 acres allowed, which would in any way allow proper rearing and educating a family."

Answering the question "what service is the public land giving at the present time," Dr. Peterson said: "It is subsidizing the income of the homes already established and it is giving the grazing necessary for the cattle and sheep industry of the west, and this response is the most economic that can be expected from the lands as they are now located."

Regarding the future disposition of the lands, Dr. Peterson recommended public control. "What the stockmen are looking for," he said, "is an orderly and economic supervision of the land, which is now fully occupied, but with much controversy as to rights and privileges and that the supervision will recognize and preserve the legitimate industries now established and bring to each state and each industry the full fruition of what these lands are capable of."

Hildebrand Man Seeks Road Aid

Asking for aid in repairing five miles of road which leads to the main highway in the Hildebrand district, Emil Eggert, prominent rancher of that vicinity, appeared before the county court this afternoon.

In the vicinity of Hildebrand farmers have been doing voluntary road work during the bad weather and the road at the present time is almost impassable, according to Mr. Eggert. This road, a stretch of five or more miles, which leads to the main highway, is traveled by close to 40 families.

"What the road needs is gravel and we are in hopes the members of the county court will be able to aid us in making this road passable," Mr. Eggert remarked.

ham, dispatched to repair the Crater lake telephone line, was instructed to keep on the lookout for the two men.

"Despite the fact that there has been a blizzard and that the town men were scheduled to have returned to Fort Klamath Thursday night, I do not believe they are lost," Alfred Castel said today. "They were experienced woodsmen, and knew every foot of the territory and would not attempt to break through to Fort Klamath in case of a storm."

Waiting In Shack "It is believed they are sojourning in one of the government houses in the park until the storm mitigates. No search party has been organized and will not be until there is more evidence of their being lost."

The two men left last Monday for Crater lake with a moving picture camera to take pictures. They had told friends they would return Wednesday or Thursday night. In the mean time a heavy snow storm started and rendered traveling hazardous.

Malin High Teams Victors in Games

The Malin high school basketball teams emerged victors over two of the closest games ever witnessed in Klamath county last night on the Henley floor. The two girls' teams put up a game seldom approached in point of real excitement and hard playing. The score was tied many times throughout the game and only by a great drive at the very close of the game were the Malin girls able to claim victory by a scant two points margin.

Marl Short, with 13 points was highest scorer for Henley while Mary Jelinek with 13 was the highest for Malin.

The two boys' teams not to be outdone put on a game that kept every spectator in a frenzy from start to finish. First one team and then the other would take the lead. Louis Kawokowski, the 6 foot 2 inches center of the Malin five was a tower of strength for his team during the first half. The first half ended with Henley leading by two points. As the second half started they increased their lead but the veteran Malin team was not to be denied and the deadly shooting of Miksoyky, Malin forward soon brought his team on even terms. The battle continued to wage until the very last minute of the game when a terrific offensive netted Malin several baskets and a two point lead at the final whistle. By far the outstanding players were Booth of Henley with 21 points and Miksoyky of Malin with 25 points to their credit. Although extremely hard fought, the game was marked by a fine feeling of real sportsmanship on both sides. Andy Street's team of Malin shows great promise and will most surely be heard from before the season is over.

Lineup HENLEY: Dixon, 4; Martin, 2; Booth, 24; Dixon, 2; Hess, 0; Myers, 0. MALIN: Staskal, 0; Miksoy, 25; Rygnas, 0; Ramarat, 0; Kowolowski, 3; Paygar, 2; Hslosake, 0; Micka, 2; Potweek, 0; Paygar, 2. Referee, Murray.
