AT THE LIBERTY

They have taken James Oliver Curwood's story, "Tentacles of the North," to Hollywood. And, according to the screen version of it, they brought the Arctic Sea to California, froze into it a rugged old whaling ship, and turned loose a crew of half-mad men, a beautiful girl and the great mystery of the waste spaces.

"Tentacles of the North," is at the Liberty theatre today. Gaston Glass, as the young naval officer who joined the Van Horn whaling expedition for a lark, deserves no little credit for the finish of his performance, its realism and superior characterization.

As Dan Blake, the gentleman adventurer who becomes a beast beneath the spell of the Arctic gloom, Joseph Girard takes even honors with the principals, and Frank Baker, as the heavy-fisted first mate, is deserving of equal praise.
