A Correction—

Announcement in these columns yesterday of the illustrated lecture to be given in the First Methodist church next Sunday evening by Dr. Albert S. Hisey of Salem carried the statement that a charge for admission would be made. This is an error. The lecture is free and the public are cordially invited.

Dr. Hisey, who is superintendent of the Eastern District of the Methodist church, speaks in the interest of a better understanding between the various races and classes which compose our complex civilization. The art slides with which the lecture is illustrated, are here shown for the first time and provide realistic glimpses of the strange conditions under which large portions of the world's population are compelled to live.
