Noted Violinist Coming

Taking up the study of the violin at The Bethany Conservatory at the age of sixteen, the spark of genius in evidence since childhood won for young Allpress a scholarship under the most competent of instructors.

After filling this position for two years he resigned to continue his studies in Europe with Alexandria Fiedemann, of the famous Sterns Conservatory, Berlin. He then studied one year with the great American violinist, George Lehmann, after which he went to Leipzig, where his study of music with Albert Osborne was strictly upon the deepest of scientific principles.

Dr. Jules Steber of Berlin wrote of Mr. Allpress' song "The Skylark": "It is like unto a rainbow of harmony, like dew that falls from a white cloud." He will appear on Chautauqua this coming week.
