Married In East—

Of more than passing interest is the following clipping from The Medford Mail Tribune, telling of the marriage of Roger P. Welles and Miss Rachael Cronquist. Miss Cronquist left here but a short time ago for Chicago where the marriage to Mr. Welles was solemnized. She was one of the most popular teachers of the Klamath county high school.

"Evidently Roger P. Welles, former chief ranger of Crater National park, whose home is in the east, and Miss Rachael Cronquist, prominent teacher in the Klamath Falls high school, stole a march on their friends in southern Oregon who had expected, following the announcement of their engagement last winter, a big wedding at Klamath Falls.

The following Associated Press telegram was received by The Mail Tribune this noon from Portland:

"A special to The Telegram from Chicago says Roger P. Welles, of Medford, Ore., and Miss Rachael Cronquist, of Portland, were licensed to wed in Chicago today."

Mr. Welles' home is at New Haven, Conn., where his family is prominent and he only served a one-year season as Crater National Park chief ranger, having come here especially, shortly after his graduation from Yale, to take that position. He resigned early last fall to return east to go into business with his father and his present home is at Southport, Conn.

It was during his visits at Klamath Falls while serving as chief ranger that he met Miss Cronquist and the romance grew up which culminated in the wedding in Chicago today.

"Good-bye, Trunk!"

The baggage truck takes on your trunk is off. The children cry "Good-bye, trunk!"

Usually, you and the trunk meet again according to schedule. But sometimes the trunk is lost or stolen. Then it is "good-bye, trunk," in earnest. To recover it or its value through the usual avenues may mean an expenditure of time and trouble fairly equal to the value of the trunk itself.

A Baggage Policy indemnifies you against loss, and with only the insurance agent to see about it.
