At The Pine Tree

A kiss and a man in a taxi—
A kiss and a scream,
Brought no bliss or gay dream,
'Cause the miss never knew
The man who came through
The inviting door of her taxi!

Which is somewhat akin to the situation in Bebe Daniels' current farce, "A Kiss in a Taxi," which plays the Pine Tree tonight. Bebe, a Parisian barmaid, is forcibly ejected from her position by the irate proprietor after she has thrown practically every tumbler in the cafe at a presumptuous customer. Driven to the street and in need of a hiding place she bounds through the door of the first vacant taxi and a minute later a strange man sinks down beside her, places a bouquet in Bebe's hand and presses a kiss to her lips!

Well, if you've never seen a riot and you go down to see "A Kiss in a Taxi" you'll imagine that every Bolshevik in the world was on the set while Clarence Badger was putting the players through their paces. Chester Conklin heads a strong supporting company which includes Douglas Gilmore, Henry Kolker, Richard Tucker and Jocelyn Lee.

AT THE LIBERTY

The latest, Rin-Tin-Tin picture, "Hills of Kentucky," which comes to the Liberty Theatre tonight, deals with a Blue Glass Legend of a dog known as the Grey Ghost.

Back in days when starvation was ravaging the mountain settlements, men were forced to live like animals. They had no food for their beasts. Their dogs they cast from them, to fight or die.

When the dog known as the Grey Ghost was cast out, he left behind him a little boy, who had been his constant companion. The boy died of grief and starvation. But the Grey Ghost did not die. He gathered together the other dog exiles and they ran as a lean wolf-pack, terrorizing the countryside.

Some time after, when the mountaineers' condition was improving, a school teacher arrived in the mountain hamlet with her little crippled brother. Down by a stream where the boy was fishing came the Grey Ghost.

The little boy did not know enough of the countryside legend to run at sight of the animal, who had eluded the expert hunters of the territory. To the little boy, the Grey Ghost was Rin-Tin-Tin's mate, appears for the first time in a role of powerful importance. The love story of these two dogs makes beautiful and exciting screen material.
