

VIRGINIA PROUD 3 NOTED BYRDS, TOM, DICK, HARRY

Brothers Are Each Great In Own Way; Dick Leading Aviator

RICHMOND, Va., July 12.—The Old Dominion, which is the oratorical name for the state of Virginia, has been extremely proud of a great many of its sons, what with Washington, Lee, Jefferson and the rest; but it seldom regarded any of them more highly than it regards Tom, Dick and Harry.

Tom, Dick and Harry—in ordinary speech that expression means something like "everybody" or "the world and his brother," but in Virginia he refers very definitely to three men whom the state admires with whole-souled southern fervor. These three are the brothers—Byrd—Richard Evelyn, Harry Flood and Thomas. Each has achieved distinction in a different way. Their joint efforts have made the family name one to conjure with here.

THE AVIATOR
To begin with, there is Richard—the Dick of the triumvirate. Until a young man named Lindbergh came along Dick was pretty generally considered the country's leading aviator—and he apparently intends to retain that distinction in the near future, having a flight to the south pole in mind as soon as this business of spanning the Atlantic is over. Then there is Harry. To the nation at large he is less well known than Dick—but not to Virginia. In case you have forgotten, Harry Flood Byrd is the governor of the state—and is counted a very good one and a very popular one, too. In Virginia the name Byrd does not by any means mean simply the man who flew over the north pole. Finally there is Tom. The country at large knows him not at all. Yet he must be well known to Virginians.

A World War Hero
Tom is of the introspective, contemplative type. Lacking the flare for direct action that motivates Dick and Harry, his career has been, on the whole, quiet and obscure. Yet in 1917, when the call to arms came, Tom was one of the first sons of the Old Dominion to volunteer. He served well in France, making a record for bravery and fidelity to duty under fire. When the war ended he retired to the quiet of his country estate in the Shenandoah valley, tending his peach and pear orchards, enjoying life hugely and emerging from his retirement occasionally to congratulate one or the other of his brothers for some new achievement.

Tom, Dick and Harry come by

In Stonewall Jackson's Steps

Major James Christian (right), grandson of "Stonewall" Jackson of Civil War fame, has been appointed head of the military science and tactics department of the University at Chicago. His famous grandfather held the same post with Virginia Military Institute before the war of '61. With Major Christian above is Major Frederick Barrows.

their bravery and ability honestly. Their grandfather, Col. William Byrd, was a man of mettle. So was his wife, their grandmother, Mrs. Jane Byrd, who is still living and who is prouder than she can say of her three grandsons.

An Adventurous Career
She and William Byrd had been married just two years when the Civil War broke out. Byrd had brought her to Virginia from Texas, whither she and her family had migrated, when she was 7, via the covered wagon from Tennessee. She had known frontier life, and her beauty and charm made her an ornament to the Byrd plantation at Winchester, Va. She saw her husband and her two brothers enlist.

The two brothers were killed. William Byrd was listed as missing in action, and when month after month passed and no word of him came it was thought that he, too, had been slain; but the young wife refused to believe it.

At length the war ended. Still there was no word of Byrd. Then, one day, he came riding up to the plantation, dismounted, and asked gravely, "Does the Widow Byrd live here?" It developed that he had been wounded, had been captured by Federal soldiers and had been confined in a military prison at New Orleans, unable to communicate with his home.

Three Different Types
Mrs. Byrd loves to talk about her grandsons, Tom, Dick and Harry. The three were always of different type, she says; Harry was ever studious and grave, Dick venturesome and light-hearted, and Tom quiet and introspective. She is proud of Tom, proud of Harry—and oh, ever so proud of Dick.

"That boy is a case," she says. "I hope he writes a book some day, because he certainly has had a lot of fun and it would be a shame to keep it all to himself." There, then, is the country's most famous Tom, Dick and Harry. It isn't hard to understand why, in Virginia, that trio of names doesn't make just a slang expression. It refers to three brothers of whom Virginia is justifiably proud.

because of the latter's love for his innocent daughter. There are thrills galore, pathos, humor and action, but not once is there a scene of violence. This in itself, is revolutionary on the screen. In Raboch, the artistic director, who once conducted his art studio in Carnegie Hall, New York, was responsible, we suspect, not only for the artistic action with lack of bloodshed, but for the beauty of scenic effects and the smoothness of the action.

Coming Wednesday and Thursday the Liberty presents Pete Morrison in "Range Buzards," a gripping western full of exciting situations. Thursday is Uncle Hiram's Country Store—with many surprises.

At the Pine Tree

Those who witnessed the vaudeville at the Pine Tree last night had no regrets, for the presentation was for superior to the heralds announcing their arrivals.

LYTELL REPEATS HIS SCREEN TRIUMPH HERE

When Bert Lytell scored such a triumph in his Columbia version of "The Lone Wolf Returns," it was thought that he had reached the peak of his screen career. But last night this young actor was seen again at the Liberty Theatre in "Obey the Law." This time from the pen of Max Marcin, the successful playwright, and Lytell's triumph was repeated.

With the support of a superb cast Lytell presents the story of a super-crook who assisted his pal
