

PLANE CRASHES ON ISLAND

VIENNESE REVOLT; MOB ATTACKS PALACE

2 AVIATORS NARROWLY MISS DEATH

Machine, Out of Gasoline, Forced Down; Hits Tree

HONOLULU, July 15, (A.P.)—Aviator Ernest L. Smith and his navigator, Emory Bronte, landed at 9:46 a. m., Honolulu time, on the island of Molokai. Both were reported safe. The plane crashed into a tree in making the landing.

The message telling of the forced landing on the island came from Kakunakaki, a town on the island of Molokai.

Word that the Smith plane had landed on one of the Hawaiian Islands came as a complete surprise here, for the last word of the plane was received at 10:15 Pacific time when the steamer Wilhelmina advised radio stations here that she received a message from Bronte saying the plane had landed at sea.

The Wilhelmina told land stations she was changing her course and would speed at forced draft toward the position given out by Bronte as the point of descent.

The Wilhelmina estimated she was then about 20 miles from the plane's indicated position.

Two other vessels, the army transport Keweenaw and liner President Pierce, caught the fliers' SOS signals and advised land stations they were deviating from their course to go to their aid.

Not a word was received from the plane from the time Bronte signalled they were landing in the sea until messages were sent by them from the island of Molokai, where they crashed in a forced landing.

THREE KILLERS HANGED WHILE 'CONS' LOOK ON

JOLIET, Ill., July 15, (A.P.)—Outdoors, in a heavy fog, while 400 men who only a moment before had been laughing and shouting looked on, 3 of 7 convicts who slew Peter Klein, deputy warden at the state penitentiary near here May 5, 1926, were hanged at 6:13 o'clock this morning.

Those who witnessed the execution had fought and struggled for an hour to get into the enclosure, walled about by a 20 foot board fence. On a triple trap in the gallows they were dropped to simultaneous deaths—Roberto Torres, whose last minute plea for a stay failed; Wafar Stalesky, whose regret was that he could not again see his wife and children; and Charles Dueschawski, "tough guy" who softened at the last and sought the sanctuary of religion.

The 3 condemned men presented a strange appearance in that they mounted the scaffold with long flowing hair, mustache and beards. Since they attempted to escape for the third time six weeks ago they had been denied razors or the services of a barber.

Stalesky and Torres spent their last hours in prayer.

PHEASANTS TO BE LIBERATED

300 Game Birds Due to Arrive From Game Farm Saturday

Sold on Klamath as an ideal district for the birds to thrive and multiply, the state game commission has authorized the shipment from the state game farm at Eugene of 300 Chinese pheasants to be released in the Klamath basin by District Game Warden Marion F. Barnes. The pheasants, full grown, will be loaded on a southbound Southern Pacific train in Eugene tonight at 9 p. m., and will arrive in Klamath Falls tomorrow morning.

Pheasants by reason of unlimited feed, natural coverage and the open winters of the past four years have multiplied rapidly in the Klamath basin. Reports from Tule lake, lower Klamath lake and the lower section of the Klamath irrigation district, are to the effect that there are thousands of the birds in the grain fields and in the thousands of acres of weeds.

Barnes has not announced where the birds will be released. Despite the fact that the pheasants have been raised in pens, they quickly adapt themselves to new conditions when liberated.

REVOLUTION THREATENED IN CAPITAL

Police Fail to Check Frenzied Crowds; Many Killed

LONDON, July 15, (AP)—Disorders and bloodshed, which are characterized by the Vienna correspondent of The Evening News as "constituting a revolution," prevailed throughout the afternoon and were continuing this evening in the Vienna capital.

The acquittal of soldiers who were accused of the murder of a Socialist, precipitated rioting which grew in intensity as the day proceeded. There have been numerous clashes between the mob and the Gardarmie, who used carbines, pistols and sabres, in an effort to stem the trouble. Some on both sides are reported dead and many are said to have surrendered.

The correspondent said the rioting there developed into a regular battle and adds the following: "All shops have been closed and tram and omnibus services have been suspended. Mob Furious. A furious mob attacked university workers. A general strike has been proclaimed. Railwaymen are removing the rails, stopping the rail service."

The correspondent says the "revolution" apparently is organized and is succeeding. Latest reports, he says, state that fifty persons have been killed and hundreds wounded. Troops have been called out, he adds, but are un dependable. The wildest demonstrations occurred in the Ring Strauss. Parliament Suspended. Parliament suspended its sitting. The newspapers ceased publishing and many factories closed.

The police station near the town hall was set afire and many windows in Parliament house and the law courts were smashed. The demonstrators first tried to attack the parliament buildings. The police succeeded in clearing the places whereupon the crowd rushed to the court house. Here they overran the police, broke down the iron gratings and forced their way into the building. Fires were lighted in the interior of the court house whereupon socialist organizations in uniform tried to get control of the socialist masses but without success. The police then were ordered to use their carbines. There are many wounded and some dead on both sides.

Smith Monoplane Crashes

Here is the Pacific Air Transport monoplane which spanned the 2400 miles between the Hawaiian Islands and San Francisco only to be forced down for lack of gasoline. Although Ernest Smith and his pal Bronte failed to avoid a tree in effecting a landing, neither of the intrepid aviators was injured in the fall. According to an authentic report, this plane is either the same or a replica of the plane used here last year by the Klamath Air Service which later discontinued business. Through several legal processes, the Pacific Air Mail Transport came in possession of the Klamath Air Service's one and only monoplane, which was often seen in the air over Klamath Falls.
