

RUBBER YIELD TO BE DOUBLED

NEW YORK, July 20, (A.P.)—The Herald-Tribune says that scientists experimenting on rubber plantations in Dutch East Indies have developed a system of bud-grafting through which the yield of rubber trees can be increased four-fold.

Through application of the new discovery, says the newspaper, which comes just at the time when Thomas A. Edison hoped to give the market a rubber substitute, the price of crude rubber will be cut from twenty-five to ten cents a pound.

"The new discovery is tremendous," Frank R. Henderson, president of the New York Rubber Exchange, is quoted as saying. "It means that the rubber industry has been able to solve its problems from the inside and it is only a question of time when competition will necessitate the supplanting of all existing areas with new plantations employing the new method."

The principles of bud-grafting established by the late Luther Burbank, naturalist, form the basis for the new discovery, the Herald-Tribune says.

Spreading of the new process will ultimately result in the cost reduction of tires, surgical supplies and flooring material, Mr. Henderson is further quoted as saying, and will mean the doom of the present reclaiming process, through which old tires and scraps produce 24 per cent of "crude" rubber, used in this country at present.

PARIS, July 21. (AP) — An "Evening of Rhesis" at the Grand Palace, the government's exposition building, has stimulated the vogue for them.

Mannequins from dressmaking shops paraded with modern shawls, but also all forms and varieties were displayed. Many dated from the time of Napoleon, when the beautiful Madame de Bourrienne, wife of the great emperor's private secretary, started the fashion by wearing a "cashmere."

The rage for shawls lasted several generations. Persons frequently have large collections, regarding them as excellent investments. In 1860 the shawl "went out." Until recently they were used for all sorts of decorations, even to wall coverings.

PARIS, July 21. (AP) — The present year is expected to be "the biggest legion year since 1921," Howard P. Savage, national commander, said here today where he stopped briefly enroute to the Oregon state convention at La Grande. He will return here July 27 for the Washington state convention.

"I shall be able to report at the national convention in Paris in September almost 100 percent completion of our program," he announced.

"And it took the entire organization—all the 11,000 posts—to put it across, not any individual post or department."

Commander Savage is attending eight legion state conventions on his present trip.

NEW YORK, July 20, (A.P.)—Despite the heavy liquidation inspired by the belief that the market has been climbing too rapidly, stock prices continue to move upward today under the stimulus of aggressive pool operations in a wide assortment of specialties. Scores of issues were bid up 1 to 6 1/2 points, with comparatively few weak spots scattered throughout the list.
