At the Pine Tree

AT THE PINE TREE.

Rey is Clit's Protector in Wild Horse Film "No Man's Law."

Serpentine Springs, halting place for the hunted, where every whispering shadow was a warning, was ruled over by a great, black stallion of wild beauty, cunning and devilry. Near this oasis in Death Valley lived old Jake Belcher with his daughter, Toby.

Toby's home was a shack, her one "rock" was a ragged shirt and faded overalls, nature was her mother, and her playmate was the wild horse, who allowed no other human being near him. Next to his mate, Lady, Toby was the one this wild creature most loved—she was his, to be guarded and protected.

One sunrise, two men saw a flash of white through the sagebrush—saw a girl poised on a rock, fly through the air, a graceful figure, and then splash into the cold water of the pool. It was Toby at her morning bath, and the men had only the night before crossed the state border a few leaps ahead of the sheriff. And her, at hand, were two prizes to be had for the taking—a girl and Jake's gold mine.

But these two had men reckoned without Toby's guardian, the wild horse of thundering hoofs; and they reckoned without the spark of decency that still burned unextinguished in the soul of Spider O'Day, who, while far from being a saint, was a better man than Sharkey Nye.

During the twenty-four hours from one sunrise to the next there is enacted a powerful drama between these four human characters and Rex, the wild horse, in "No Man's Law," the feature showing Sunday at the Pine Tree theater. Barbara Kent, James Finlayson, Olive Hardy and Theodore Von Eltz comprise the cast.

"Come Unto Me" sang the pious widow in the church but she winked at the old reprobate deacon across the aisle.

Lots of them are fine cooks if you can live on snails and fudge.

Louise Bell, plaintiff, vs. Harry Bell, defendant.

In the name of the State of Oregon, you are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint on file in the above entitled suit, on or before the 3rd day of September, 1927, that being the last day for such appearance prescribed in the order of the Court for the publication of this summons, and if you so fail to appear and answer, for want thereof the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief prayed for in her complaint, viz: for the dissolution of the bonds of matrimony heretofore existing between plaintiff and defendant upon the grounds of desertion by you of the defendant for more than one year last past and immediately preceding the filing of plaintiff's complaint.

This summons is served upon you by publication in the Evening Herald, a daily newspaper, printed, published and of general circulation in Klamath County, Oregon, for four successive and consecutive weeks pursuant to order of the Hon. A. L. Lovvitt, judge of the above entitled court.

Rattler Strikes As Young Golfer Reaches for Ball

UPLAND, CALIF., Aug. 20. (E. P.)—Donald Mack, 17-year-old golfer, thought he found a golf ball on a course here.

Skirmishing about in the rough seeking his lost ball he thought he had found the elusive pellet and reached for it. It wasn't a golf ball. The huge rattlesnake, which he had grasped, struck without the usual warning and imbedded its fangs in the lad's leg. Mack tore the shirt from his back and bound it tightly above the wound, an action which doctors credit with the saving of his life.

All of which Mack declares is one reason why golfers should play the fairways and the greens and leave the rough alone.

Now that Rumania has a six-year-old monarch would you say a cat may play with a king?
