Up to Minute is This 'Holy City' in West

The sound of cash registers and the busy work of the hot dog stand, gasoline station, dancehall, etc., rather than harps and wings are in evidence at the "Holy City" near Los Gatos, Calif., conducted by the cult headed by W. R. Riker. The chief has just been sued for $500,000 by Evelyn Rosenkrantz, former disciple, who charges breach of promise in a love pact. Above is a general view of the "Holy City" activities. Right is a disciple standing beside one of the advertising signs showing the credo. The little church-like object at the left of this picture is a "peep-show."
