

BURGER KAYOED BY J. RENAULT

Heavyweight Title Contender Makes Short Work of Hoot

PORTLAND, March 7. (AP)—Jack Renault, Canadian heavyweight, made short work of Hoot Burger, of Dodge City, Kans., in their scheduled 10 round main event here last night. After Burger went down for the seventh time in the third round, Referee Gruman gave up the effort of counting and raised the Canadian's hand. Burger made a good start, but after taking a few of Renault's short crashing right hooks to the jaw, he was on the defensive.

Jimmy Dolan took a decision over Jud James in the semi-windup.

Don Mack and George Hval, six rounds, staged the best bout of the evening. Mack being awarded the nod.

Teddy Fox, of Salem, took a four round decision over Joe Calder, and Joe Mancillas, out-pointed Alce Weber in the four-round curtain raiser.

1 Minute Interviews

Roger Peckinpugh Says:

Since I am the one new manager in the American league, I realize my showing will be closely watched. I am hopeful the play of the Cleveland club will reflect to the credit of the players and myself.

I have been asked from many quarters as to my plans for the coming season. I can only reply that I have no intentions of trying any innovations in the handling of a major league club.

During my long career I have played under a number of successful managers, and I might add, that none of them employed exactly the same system in the handling of their men.

I have discovered that with the ball player who is loyal, the honor system is by far the best way to take care of his deportment off the ball field. Put the issue squarely up to the player as to his behavior and if he is a regular guy he is going to do the right thing.

There will be no set retiring hour for the Cleveland athletes, although it is my thought that every player should be in bed before midnight. If a man fails to observe proper rules, his playing soon suffers and in the end he pays the penalty.

Golf is all right with me during spring training and on off days. The ban is one golf only on days when there is a game scheduled. Where will we finish? Ask me something easy. I am shooting at the top of the second division, fifth place. Should we squeeze into the first division, I would be the most pleased man in the majors.

BODY IS FOUND

MARSHFIELD, March 7. (AP)—The body of James E. Cowan, 40, son of Mary E. Cowan, government meteorologist here, was found today in Coos Bay at the foot of Commercial avenue, when officers dragged the bay. The coroner pronounced death due to accidental drowning. Cowan had been missing since Monday midnight, when he disappeared from the government tug Charles Powell.

Earth's Outside Now Known, Explorers Turn to Its Insides

WITH the South Pole discovered, the North Pole becoming almost familiar and the interior of Africa coming to be fairly mapped, it is being widely observed that the vocation of the explorer bears its end. Exploring has been one of the interesting and engrossing occupations of man ever since he was placed here.

Yet about all we know about our world relates to its surface. If it were a football covered with the thinnest tissue paper, our knowledge of the insides would be confined to the tissue paper stratum, and only a very little of that. Men are only just getting fairly started finding what is inside this astonishing big ball, and the more they learn the more amazing it is.

Exploration in future will be increasingly directed inward in the search for the vast stores of wealth and resources that are there. Only within a few years have we been learning some highly important details about these interesting insides. These salt domes. There must be a tremendous amount of salt somewhere in the earth's insides, for over great areas what are called salt domes exist far down under the surface, masses of salt having been pushed up there from still lower areas by the internal pressure. Oil in its migrations through the loose formations encountered these salt masses and, being unable to penetrate them, is held there. Throughout the Texas oil area, wherever oil has been found it has been associated with these salt domes. They are so numerous in some areas that as good an authority as Mr. Wallace E. Pratt declares that if a hole 10,000 feet deep could be drilled anywhere in the Texas Gulf Coast area it could logically be expected to produce oil. And Mr. Pratt adds:

WALLACE E. PRATT

"In the Gulf Coast region, outside the salt dome area proper, chances for new discoveries are equally good. Our knowledge of the occurrence of oil in this part of our province is even less complete, and in spite of a larger past production our exploration has only just begun.

"In the face of these possibilities the nature of oil-cutting in the Gulf Coast region has always been unprecedentedly great in the Corsicana-Powell area we drilled wells for twenty-five years before we found at Powell internally in the midst of our drilling, a reservoir containing almost 100,000,000 barrels of oil.

"At Spindletop, after a similar lapse of time and effort we had 50,000,000 barrels and within the shadow of the derricks in our old dry holes. In a single township in Oklahoma fifty dry holes had been drilled. This figure, which is equivalent to two dry holes per square mile, has been cited as evidence of the hazard of drilling in Oklahoma.

"At Spindletop, even after the presence of oil had been established, forty dry holes were drilled on an area of less than one square mile before the recent large production was finally discovered at a comparatively shallow depth.

"There are fifty-one known salt domes in the salt dome region proper, excluding eight oil or gas fields that may also be related to salt domes, too deeply buried to have been detected as yet. There are twenty-one additional known salt domes in other parts of the Gulf Coast region, and others undoubtedly are waiting to be discovered. Thirty of the known salt domes have produced significant quantities of oil, among which fourteen have made more than 1,000,000 barrels each. Numerous small leases have yielded 225,000 barrels an acre. If, as is generally believed, we produced less than one-quarter the total available oil at our present efforts, these salt dome fields are wonderfully rich oil reservoirs."

KLAMATH HIGH FIVE DEFEATED

The second team of Klamath County high school was defeated in a game with the Merrill high school team at Merrill Tuesday night. The final score stood 19 to 12.

It was a hard fought game but Klamath was unable to ward off defeat in a former game between the two teams Klamath was victorious.

Luck was with Klamath in the girls' game when the local team won with a high score of 28-8. This is the second victory for the Klamath girls over Merrill.

Leading Coast Grapplers to Enter Klamath Tournament

Probably the best series of mat exhibitions ever given fans in a city the size of Klamath Falls, is assured with word from A. McDuffee, matchmaker for the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

that virtually every leading bone crusher on the coast will appear in the wrestling tourney to be staged here this spring and early summer.

McDuffee returned from Portland Tuesday night, where he made arrangements for a number of contenders to appear locally, and announced the initial bout of the big time wrestling tournament will be staged in Scandia hall March 22, next week.

Local talent will be given a chance in the opening championship series as Henry Burke, city, has been signed to meet the well known Sailor Jack, leage Lefty Challs, a Klamath youth with a leaning toward a mat career. This match will be the first of a series to decide the county championship.
