QUICK WIT OF CHAMPION WINS FROM ASPIRANT

Strangler Lewis Knocks Opponent Unconscious in Hard Bout

LOS ANGELES, May 3.—(AP)—The resourcefulness and presence of mind acquired by Ed "Strangler" Lewis, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, in his many grapplings with the top notchers of the wrestling game today had stood him in good stead again

Facing young and powerful Nick Lutze here last night in a finish match, Lewis literally crushed the championship aspirations of the former Notre Dame football star after he, the titleholder, had been on the defensive throughout the early part of the match. Lutze started out fast and displayed a whole flock of punishing holds. A painful jackknife scissors, Lutze's stock in trade grip, was clamped on several times but Lewis, and his crown, always slipped away.

Finally, after 1 hour, 29 minutes and 35 seconds of give-and-take, Lutze again secured his body-constructing scissors. Lewis, however, seeing a sudden opening, grasped young Nick by head and feet, stood up and then, before anyone knew what was happening, fell heavily with Lutze underneath. Lewis' 230 pounds, employed as they were, proved entirely too much for his opponent and the latter was carried from the ring unconscious and bleeding. A five-minute rest left him little better off and the match was awarded to the titleholder.

Later examinations by physicians showed Lutze had been badly shaken up and cut over the right eye, but not seriously hurt.

Hooks and Slides

George Von Elm recently shot a 63 and a 65 in one day on a par 70 course in California and this can be made as a terse and significant announcement that the former national amateur champion is going to do more than merely write an entry for the big classics this summer.

After Von Elm had knocked off Bobby Jones two and one in the amateur championship in 1926 he became a celebrated young man, but last year he dropped out of important notice until Jack Kearns announced that he had signed him up to play professionally.

Kearns, as you know, used to deal exclusively in fighters until golf began to get a hold with the masses and when Kearns became a golf bug his mind naturally turned to the dough end of the game. Being a good picker, the former manager of Jack Dempsey tried to get Von Elm.

Von Elm denied the reports that he would join Mickey Walker, the middleweight champion, under the Kearns banner and he made the denial official a few days ago when he announced that he was working for a place on the American Walker Cup team and would play in the national amateur and open championships.

* * *

If he is knocking sevens and fives off par seventies this early in the season there can be little doubt that there will be a place for him on the Walker Cup team that is to play the British in Chicago and that he will be one of the important fellows in the two big classics.

INTEREST IN MACKENZIE

Bobby Jones, who allowed the boat to sail away with the American entries for the British open without making a last minute dash for a passport and a boat ticket, has been whacking the ball around nicely in Atlanta and has one good 64 on his home course without hard trying.

Young Watts Gunn, the college champion and the second best known Atlanta golfer, is also palpitating the heart of O. B. Keeler, who can palpitate at his best only when Jones and Gunn are furnishing the palpitation.

No sensational scores have been reported from Washington where Roland Mackenzie is getting ready for the massed attack that will be made this summer against the Jones citadel. Mackenzie hasn't been bearing down in his spring practice rounds, but the young man is improved physically about 100 per cent and strength has been what he most needed.

"If Mackenzie's hands and arms are strong enough so that they will not tire or cramp on him this summer, he ought to be a wow," a prominent critic said a few days ago.

If that critic could shake hands with young Mackenzie right now and get a hold of that woodman's grip he would be convinced that the nice-looking Washington youth will be a wow.

TO AID OLYMPIC CAUSE

Even if Jones has passed up the British classics there is little danger that he will be short of work when the time comes for the American championships. Even a high-powered young lawyer can break away from the court room and the directors' room in the main bank long enough to practice some. Jones also consented to make an exhibition tour with Watts Gunn to raise funds for the American Olympic fund.

The donation of his time and service to the Olympic cause is commendable in Jones. It wasn't so long ago that some of those purists, who are glad now to accept his generosity, were making dirty cracks about him and his $50,000 house.

Twenty-Five Years Of Ourselves—

As A Keen Critic Has Observed Us On Parade At Atlantic City

By HORTENSE SAUNDERS
NEA Service Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, May — "The bathing suits down on the beach are different, but the people inside them are not—it is only the externals of life that change much in a quarter of a century."

So said Dr. Henry M. Fisher, just rounding out his twenty-fifth year of service as rabbi of the Beth Israel Reformed Synagogue—a mellow, philosophical man who believes that America is a pretty sound country, and that the majority of us have pretty good hearts, no matter how we argue to the contrary.

A Nerve Center His Home

He has seen Atlantic City grow from a small Jersey resort to a national playground. He has seen the automobile and the movie lure people from the home and the radio lure them back. He has watched all America in its pursuit of pleasure and play, and still remains an optimist.

"Naturally," he agreed, "when people go away on pleasure trips, they do not go away to attend church. And yet the churches of this city always are filled. Half my congregation, and it is the same with other churches, are strangers.

Made Cultural Progress

"People play more and play harder than they used to. They ride faster and live faster. The whole tempo of life is accelerated. Where the young woman of 25 years ago stayed out until 11 in the evening, the flapper stays out until two. But the difference is only relative—a matter of three hours—and it is just as easy to get into difficulty before 11 as it is after."

Dr. Fisher believes we can get no estimate of the real progress, or lack of it, in any age, if we look at the external and the obvious.

Culturally, no one can deny our progress, he said.

"Twenty-five years ago, people were not so interested in lectures, books, music, art and the sciences as they are today. True, they were not so available, but a taste for them had to be cultivated before they could be appreciated. Today people are eager for the arts," Rabbi Fisher observed.

"Nor do I remember that the young married set of a quarter of a century ago were so interested in social service and in community good as they are now.

Variety Then and Now

"Of course, the whole truth is that the people of 25 years ago were not all the same, just as they are not today. There were casuists and enthusiasts, and there were the sensationalists and the dilletantes, and the mass that followed their various leaders.

"Certainly not everyone then was interested in religion or morality or in being so saintly. They were just about like we are today, in different hats and coats and a slightly different political and social setting."

In matters of education, he pointed out improvement, too. A member of the Atlantic City schoolboard for 16 years, he has been close to the subject.

"The schools have broadened out immeasurably, not only in curriculum, but in vocational guidance," Dr. Fisher said. "Schools recognize the responsibility of fitting pupils for life as well as for examinations.

"Certainly the whole country is more prosperous and more generous.

Choose Your Goat

"I always have preached optimism and altruism. I honestly believe that you find just about what you look for in life, and if you look for what is splendid and uplifting, you will find it.

"It is particularly true in a place such as Atlantic City. There are wild tales of wild goings-on here, and I am quite sure if one started out to find them, one could. I myself have not been interested in them. I have been tremendously interested in the spiritual development, here, and I have found it most satisfying."

Rev. Fisher came to Atlantic City immediately after he finished his religious training in Cincinnati. He was to be given a banquet on the date of his 25th anniversary, with prominent religious and educational leaders as guests.

Washburn and Sailor Woods To Meet Tonight in Card to Be Held at 6th and Klamath

A big, brawny, broad-shouldered Swede strode into the Herald office this morning.

"I'm George Washburn," he announced, "and I just wish you'd pass the word on through your column's that there's going to be a real match tonight when I meet Sailor Jack Woods in the main event of a wrestling card.

"I've been looking for that bird for a long, long time and have tried every possible means to get him into a match. Now I've got him cornered and I'm happy. Whatever the outcome of this match, I'll guarantee the fans more wrestling action than they've seen for many a moon."

One got the impression that Washburn knew whereof he spoke. He is a large man, about 175 pounds, has massive shoulders sloping down to a thin waste.

"I've been trying for a long time to get these Oregon wrestlers into action—the big boys, I mean," he continued. "Thye and Karasick won't accept a match and Woods, up until tonight, has also been consistent in dodging."

Washburn has a long and fine record during his 16 years in the game. He started in in the middlewest—where all the great mat men are raised, and gradually worked across the nation, leaving behind him a trail of victories.

Tonight's match will be the first to be held in the new wrestling auditorium on the southwest corner of Sixth and Klamath avenue. The old J. S. Mills Implement building has been renovated on the interior and can seat 800.

This will be the fourth of a series of elimination bouts sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars in an attempt to determine the light heavyweight champion of the Pacific coast. Woods has won his two matches in the tournament. Tonight is his third try.

Snappy preliminaries will be staged before the main event.

At The Orpheus

Paris cafes and boulevards were reproduced on a lavish scale at the Mero-Goldwn-Mayer studio for "On Ze Boulevard.", with Lew Cody and Renee Adoree in the principal roles, which is now playing at the Orpheus. It is a lilting romance of a waiter who inherits a fortune and a score of trials and tribulations, all of a comical nature, with it. Harry Millarde directed the new comedy.

"SYMPATHY PARADE"

NEW BEDFORD, Mass, May 2. —(UP)—Nearly 200 persons, including textile strikers, their wives and children, today staged a "sympathy parade" before the Hathaway mill. It was the first sort of demonstration since the 25,000 textile workers struck in protest to a 10 per cent wage cut.

Jack Dempsey enjoys wild west and detective stories, says a sports writer. Why doesn't he subscribe to a couple of the Chicago newspapers?
