ord for women, besides being the only woman to finish the Catalina channel race.

Mrs. Huddleston, who weighs 240 pounds, was not put on the scales when taken from the tank, but the 12 swimming coaches of Chicago athletic associations who acted as officials during the endurance attempt estimated that she had lost 20 or more pounds. When she finished the Catalina channel swim she came out of the water 15 pounds lighter.

Physicians immediately took the swimmer in charge. She was unable to draw herself from the water, nor was she able to remain on her feet. A wheel chair was taken to the side of the pool and Mrs. Huddleston wheeled to her room.

Only three times during the 50 hours did she take nourishment and only hot chocolate then. She finished the swim much fatigued. Her hands and feet were shrunken from the long immersion.

During the entire time she was in the water a group of officials was present to see that she did not touch either the sides of the tank nor the bottom.

Mrs. Huddleston's reward for the record breaking was $5,000.
