

BRIEF NEWS

OF KLAMATH

A Fish Story—The uncertainty and the paradox of fishing lend a tang to this time honored sport. Incidents similar to those experienced by George Black and Glen Terrill Sunday on Rogue River provide the necessary "kick." Terrill is an experienced steelhead fisherman with all the necessary tackle for this difficult fishing. Black had never fished the Rogue before—the gamey steelhead was just a name to him. The two men fished Saturday afternoon, and not a strike. Sunday morning they fished for hours, trying everything they could discover in their various creels. The veteran Rogue river angler was on a par with the novice. About noon Black rummaged around in his creel and brought forth a strange looking feathered contraption, two inches long with a black body and bright red wings. In size it resembled a hummingbird rather than a natural fly. (Black later explained he had made the fly himself back in Iowa with more or less success). This upward of steelhead Salmon lure was tied onto a long shank hook and then hurried with a loud "plop" into the fast waters of the Rogue. Suddenly there was a hard smash, and the first steelhead of the week-end was on Terrill, the veteran, looked on amazed. Not once but five times did Black hook and land splendid steelhead salmon of the strange mixture on the end of his line, Terrill with his fish files could not so much as raise a trout.

LET CONTRACT FOR SEWER JOB

Short Session of City Council Held Last Night

One of the shortest meetings which the city council has held during the history of their sessions took place last night when the regular Monday night meeting lasted only about an hour.

A letter was presented and read from the Southern Pacific railroad regarding the strike which is now threatening among conductors and trainmen. Matters were stated as they now stand since the two mediations, suggested were turned down. The council will take no side in the matter, but it was decided to wire Samuel Winslow asking him to urge the president to appoint a finding commission to meet and try to arbitrate the strike before it is called.

Plans for the new city sewage system which should have been here several weeks ago have been delayed. Mayor T. B. Waters was instructed to wire C. C. Kennedy, engineer on the project, to find out the reason for the delay.

The contract for the completion of the eighth sewer unit was awarded W. D. Miller since he was low bidder out of three, according to Councilman Peiz, chairman of the street committee.

A. J. Mansfield was refused a permit to operate a junk establishment at the corner of Oak and Broad streets. Nineteen building permits were granted aggregating $21,536.
