

ROTARY HEARS G. M. CORNWALL

With his ever present Scotch wit, which he admits has been borrowed from the Irish race, George M. Cornwall, editor and owner of the Timberman, published at Portland, talked to the Rotarians Friday noon on his recent trip to Australia and New Zealand. Mr. Cornwall is a clever Scotchman with a wealth of good stories, a keen observing disposition, and of a thrifty economic turn of mind. His talk was along the lines of raising peanuts—insignificant subject, to be sure, but he got almost as much out of his subject as Bryan did when he pulled the "Cross of Gold and the Crown of Thorns."

Barney Rea was chairman Friday at the noon luncheon. It was a doctor's program and Dr. Hardin Carter spoke on teeth. He gave a thesis on teeth that was enlightening.

Dr. E. D. Johnson spoke on health bureaus. Developing the thought of health, the doctor showed conclusively that people would not look after themselves unless a governmental bureau demanded such action. In other words, the health of the nation rests with a constant carefulness and watchfulness on the part of the government to protect people from themselves. The doctor's clear cut reasoning and his entertaining illustrations caused all Rotarians to enjoy his short lecture.
