A Spasm Of Progress

TELEVISION by radio, gas bullets that can be fired around corners, practical color cameras, three kinds of talking motion pictures, automatic repairing machines for silk stockings—we are dizzy with the multitude and variety of inventions that have been announced in the last few weeks.

The summer of 1928 should be remembered in history as a continuous spasm of progress. The surprising thing about most of these inventions is the anonymity of the inventors. We remember Stephenson and Morse and Bell; our children will see their pictures in the schoolbooks for many generations. But what name emerges from the brilliant summer of 1928 as immortal? The average American could not mention a single name as associated with any of the recent great inventions. Yes, perhaps he could mention one name, that of George Eastman in connection with the color camera. But who invented the color camera? Not Mr. Eastman or even the able head of his research laboratories, Dr. C. E. Kenneth Mees. The inventor was a man who spent ten years in the Eastman laboratories studying color photography. His name is John G. Capstaff. Three cheers for Capstaff! We would like to see Capstaff cigarettes, and pictures of Capstaff blindfolded selecting Old Gold, and babies named Capstaff Jones, and yachts christened Lady Capstaff by pretty girls. This laboratory method of invention may be efficient, and we presume that Mr. Eastman gave Mr. Capstaff a handsome check for his genius, but the human throat was made to cheer heroes. And we suspect that even Mr. Capstaff would appreciate an ounce of immortality more than a ton of pay checks.

Will Have His Fling

HENRY Ford has reached a stage in his development enabling him to give rein to instincts long suppressed. Still a young man, he takes pleasure in behaving like one. Having made provision for his old age and barred the door against the entry of the wolf, he feels that he is entitled to a little relaxation. Leaving Son Edsel to keep office, Father Henry roams far afield. Provided that he gets word every week or ten days that the boys in the shop are sticking to the new model, he is content to enjoy life in his simple, old-fashioned way.

But he must have a care against the contraction of wasteful habits. It is so easy to slip into spendthrift ways. Witness the extravagance he committed last week at Providence, R. I. After a luncheon consisting of a glass of hot water and a small vegetable salad Henry tipped the waiter a dollar bill. This was inexcusable.

What sort of service will the next man wanting a glass of hot water and a small vegetable salad get if in his turn he doesn't produce a dollar bill? On the whole, we think Mr. Ford would better return to his former moderate practice and confine his luncheon tips to an order for a new car.

J. BEDFORD, JR. GETS 1ST DEER

One shot perfectly aimed from the gun of Jack Bedford, Junior, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bedford of Riverside Addition brought down a four point buck weighing 160 pounds Sunday morning.

Young Bedford, just 17 years of age with his father and N. D. Kinsbach and R. Ohlmeyer left Klamath Falls early Sunday morning for the Pukekama country. After deciding upon signals, in case of distress, the hunters separated.

Jack followed behind Kinsbach who spotted the deer, shot and missed it. Realizing he had but one chance, Bedford took aim and shot the deer in the forehead, bringing it to the ground.

He then signalled for his father and after carrying the deer several miles, camp was reached.

"When I shot it, I judged its weight at around 160 pounds, but after carrying it from eleven o'clock until three o'clock in the afternoon I decided it must weigh at least 200 pounds," Bedford commented.

For several years Bedford has hunted ducks and geese with his father, always being able to bring down as many birds as his father. This is his first deer, however.

PUSH WORK ON RE-SURFACING

On the aggregate, the re-surfacing of the Dallas-California highway from Klamath Falls south to Merrill and the Ashland-Klamath Falls highway from this city west to Keno is 62 per cent completed, state highway officials revealed today.

Work will be pushed on to completion this fall if weather permits. The Portland firm of Simonson & Hefty has the contract for the Ashland-Klamath Falls highway, while John Hampshire of Grants Pass has the contract for the Merrill road. However, in the latter job, Hampshire has let sub-contracts to the W. D. Miller Construction company and L. F. Ireton, who are handling all of the work.

W. ALDERSON ENDS OWN LIFE

but had telephoned his office that he would not be there until later.

Frank Scholl, working near the cemetery, said Mr. Alderson, sitting quietly in his car and smoking a cigarette, seemed in normal spirits shortly before 9 o'clock.

Charles Christenson, superintendent of the cemetery, found the body a few minutes later. He had placed a 22-calibre rifle barrel in his mouth and pulled the trigger. The bullet entered his brain, and death was almost instantaneous, said Deputy Coroner Roy Crabtree.

Mr. Alderson, 65, became county superintendent of schools 12 years ago.

"WORST" ROAD NOW IMPROVED

One of the worst sections of well traveled roads remaining in the state is now a thing of the past. Grading of this eight-mile stretch of the Klamath Falls-Lakeview highway between Hwy and the Fremont Forest boundary has been completed by W. C. Elliott, Portland contractor.

In the meantime, the next to the last highway link separating Klamath Falls and Lakeview is being rushed to completion by the Spokane contracting firm of Wrenn & Greenough. This firm has laid a base course of rock from the Fremont Forest boundary to a point seven miles east of Beatty. Whether or not it will be possible to lay the rest of the base course on the road, thus insuring a good road through the winter months, is not known.

KLAMATH HIGH WINS SATURDAY

By the overwhelming score of 39 to 2, the Klamath Union high school defeated the Dunsmuir high school at Fair Grounds field and rolled its string of victories up to three straight for the 1928 season.

Although the score was one-sided, the game was thrilling and held the interest of a large crowd of students and business men until the end.

The game was the first meeting on the gridiron between the two schools.

BEN MITCHELL GOES ON TRIAL

The government charges that the gang maintained three "beer joints" in the vicinity of Chiloquin and that they hid their beer supply in the Williamson river. The brew master, Assistant District Attorney Francis Marsh told the jury, had fled, and was indicted under the name of "John Doe."

Special Prohibition Agent Earl Kohler of Seattle, Wash., George Godfrey of Portland, and Ralph Kelly, now a deputy sheriff of Washington county, Oregon, secured the evidence, representing themselves as "big liquor men from California looking over the Klamath field."

It developed that while the special agents were collecting the evidence by purchases and conversations with the alleged gang, special Indian Agent George McNabb, former chief of police of Ashland, had conducted raids on the nights, following the visits of the dry agents and this aroused the suspicions of the defendants.

"We hear you fellows are federal," Mitchell is averred to have said, "and if you are, come and have a drink."

The officers convinced Mitchell they were not and the drinks were poured.

On July 2, a series of raids were held in Chiloquin and moonshine, intended for the Fourth of July celebration seized. At that time the true identity of the special agents were revealed.

OREGON LOSER IN TAX FIGHT

ed suit to obtain a share of the amount paid to the various counties in which are located re-vested lands of the Oregon-California railroad land grant. The suit was filed against Marion county, and other counties joined in the fight against the state's claim.

SALEM, Oregon, Oct. 8, (AP)—Denial by the United States Supreme court today of the state of Oregon's petition for a hearing on appeal in the Oregon & California railroad grant land tax refund case is believed to be a final determination of the case in a complete victory for the land grant counties. These 18 land grant counties, in the litigation, were fighting any appropriation of the refund to the state.

Attorney General Van Winkle, when apprised of the denial today, was not prepared to say whether further steps would be taken to get an argument before the United States court.

The action at Washington will have no effect on the condition of state funds and financial outlays now existing. State Treasurer Kay said, for the reason that in making its tax levy last year and estimating state needs the state did not take into consideration the possibility that the state might receive part of the refund. Had the state been victorious, however, Kay said, that state's deficit, estimated for the end of the year at from $600,000 to $1,500,000, would have been wiped out.

Train Arrived Late—

The arrival of the train from the north today at 12:45 noon, approximately an hour late, reminds us of the suggestion made recently that mail from the north for Ashland could be received earlier if it was sent to Klamath Falls and then relayed to Ashland via the star route, which arrives on time at 12:05 noon each day. The regularity with which the train from the north arrives in Ashland late makes this suggestion worthy of consideration.—Ashland Tidings.

Knocked unconscious and then robbed of $50 in currency, Lillian Jones of 541 Market street was today a patient at the Klamath Valley hospital where she was taken at one o'clock this morning.

A stranger, whose name she did not learn is alleged to have entered her residence at 12:45 o'clock this morning. After telling her that he had dropped his purse, he waited for the woman to look to the floor. While she was glancing at the floor, he suddenly struck her across the back of the head.

The robbery was not reported to the police department until 10 o'clock this morning. Officers were given a description of the man and a search is being made to locate him.

He is described as being about 35 years old, well dressed. A gold tooth in the front of his mouth was one mark which the woman remembers which might lead to his arrest.

"FIVE GALLON" HATS IN VOGUE

Elks today started wearing broad-brimmed "five-gallon" hats in preparation for the Western Nights celebration, which opens Wednesday night at 8 o'clock.

For many years the Elks have advertised their celebration by wearing the hats worn in the early days by those who attended the original Western Nights in the barrooms of the old West.

Today the carpets were taken up and work on decorating the hall started. The downstairs will be decorated in the "purple and white" of Elksdom, and highly decorated advertising signs, telling of the products to be obtained at the country store—nearly every product you can name from cigars to shotguns, hams and traveling bags, are being hung on the walls.

Jack Howring's orchestra will play for the "buck dance" on the second floor.

Even the best dancers and the most beautiful girls can dance for only a "buck." Nothing else, as only "buck money" can be used at the dance.

Three highly organized banks will exchange the "buck money" that for Western Nights will be worth more than the gold dollar was in '49.

Many surprises are being planned, but even the slightest hint of what they are to be will not be divulged.

Convenience urges an Extension Telephone

Just as you appreciate running water in more than one room in the house, so you would appreciate an extension telephone. Its cost is only a few cents a day; its convenience is great, and sometimes it is even a factor in guarding the safety of your household.

This home of two stories has its main telephone in the dining room and an extension in the owner's bedroom.

An extension in the owner's bedroom is convenient for the housewife by day, and makes the telephone readily available by night.

The cost is very small. Call our business office and say "I want an extension telephone."
