BROADCASTING STATION
Clocks of American manufacture were made first of wood by hand—hardwood cut with saw and file—wooden wheels, hands and dials, black walnut cases with hand-carved floral marquetry in ornate relief up and down their long front and side panels. "Grandfather's Clocks," the kind which Longfellow said stood on a turn of the stairs and ticked away: "Forever! Never! Never! Forever!"
Some of these original clocks are still running in the very farmhouses where Eli Terry succeeded in selling them, and where they have ticked off the minutes of American since the days of Awams and Jefferson.
Seth Thomas made clocks in those days. The Seth Thomas company makes clocks today. We have them an d other makes—Mantle Clocks, Kitchen Clocks, Boudoir Clocks and many Novelty Clocks. Our liberal sales discount justifies your buying one today.
