

School Class Regards Death Trial as Joke

ELKHART, Ind., Jan. 5. (U. P.)—As the prosecution in the trial of Harvey L. Smith, former circus barker and private detective, charged with murder, presented 14 gruesome exhibits before the jury, a class of high school girls and boys giggled in their seats among the spectators today.

The exhibits, a skull and other bones, were taken from the limestone grave where, the state alleges, the body of Mrs. Genevieve Stults, beauty culturist, was buried several months ago. The bones, still bearing lime, were found last October.

The high school students, who were brought to the court room as a part of their lessons in civics, took childish delight in the serious proceedings in which the life of Smith depends.

CORPORATIONS STAGE MERGER

NEW YORK, Jan. 5. (U. P.)—A gigantic merger, of momentous import to the future of broadcasting, phonographs and talking moving pictures was announced today. It involves the Radio Corporation of America and the Victor Talking Machines company.

In terms of money, the combination means the combination of approximately $500,000,000. In general terms of interest to the public, much more is involved.

Specifically, instead of fighting each other, it means close cooperation, and simultaneous and complementary development in their own distinct fields of the three big methods of providing mechanical entertainment.

Radio already had gone into the "talking" business. Now the patents of the phonograph company will be brought into use to the fullest extent in developing radio broadcasting and talking pictures, while in its own field the phonograph will be developed with the aid of the other departments in the merged company.

Perhaps the most romantic side of the merger is the rise of Radio Corporation. Five years ago its stock sold for $15 a share. Today it closed at $395. It has risen roughly 260 points in a year.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Rev. Wemett Challenged—

"The life of a minister, even in these modern times, is not all peace and tranquility," Rev. Frank Wemett, pastor of the First Methodist church stated this morning. It seems that recently the dominion in an unguarded moment, ventured the assertion before his audience, that probably more men than women attended church in Klamath Falls. But the statement, while it gave evident satisfaction to members of the masculine persuasion, present, failed to go over, according to Rev. Wemett. The women of the congregation promptly characterized the assertion as "wild guess" and have challenged the speaker to "make good." So now a contest is on. The matter is to be decided by a count of the members at the next Sunday service. "Meanwhile I'll lose some needed sleep in the fear that Klamath Falls may suffer impairment of its famed commonwealth, A Man's Town," Rev. Wemett concluded.

NEW COCKTAIL FORMULA GIVEN BY LADY ASTOR

Mix Orange Juice With Orange Juice, Suggests Noted Englishwoman

LONDON, Jan. 5. (U. P.)—The Astors—meaning Lady Astor and Viscount Astor—have broken into print again, this time on the cocktail question.

Lady Astor vigorously denounced the cocktail.

The simple formula advanced by Lady Astor has not met with great favor, however, as far as the cocktail drinkers are concerned.

The formula was:
One part orange juice mixed with one part orange juice; shake well and drink.

In the house of commons, where Lady Astor is trying to popularize the formula, it is known as the "Astor prohibition cocktail." It was pointed out that there have been few converts.

Viscount Astor, in a talk at Whitefield's Tabernacle, called the cocktail habit the worst form of drinking.
"It is usually partaken of by women and girls," he said. "It is a habit which certainly should be checked."

The enforced close companionship lasted 15 days, Hall being denied admittance during the whole period.

What happened during the period of quarantine has not been disclosed. But Thursday night Mrs. Hall and Farr were found unconscious in the snow beside Farr's wrecked automobile. They had started away together for an unknown destination.
