NOTED TACKLE OF N. Y. U. HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Al Lassman, Huge Violet Lineman, Recovers From Football Injury

NEW YORK, Jan. 11. (AP)—A giant figure stirred under the white sheets of the hospital cot. A shaggy head with wax-white features and red-rimmed eyes lifted from the pillow and stared toward the doorway of the tiny room.

"Hello," said Al Lassman. "Hello." The mammoth shoulders heaved out of the bed clothes while eyes still strained to focus a picture on the tired brain. Then the foggy mind cleared, a bellow of welcome rang out into the hospital corridors and the giant all but lifted himself right out of the cot.

This was Al Lassman, football captain of New York University's violent Violets, on the road back to health at last after one of the closest engagements any athlete ever played with death. This was the six-foot-four tackle, with his 226 pounds of surging, tearing brawn, a tackle his coach, Chick Meehan, said was "the greatest ever to pull on shoes."

Hurt Weeks Ago. It was seven weeks ago almost to a day, that Lassman played his last game of intercollegiate football. In a battle that stole the pickin' show for that one day at least, his Violets smashed the Tartans of Carnegie Tech.

unbeaten up to that day. After playing probably the finest football of his career for three quarters, Lassman was kicked in the head in the fourth period. For weeks he lay unconscious, critically hurt.

Now he is coming around again, slowly but with the almost positive assurance of medical men that he will be completely recovered within a few months.

Lassman wants that, for he has designs on the heavyweight championship left vacant by Gene Tunney.

Fight Prospect. Two years ago, as a sophomore, he won the intercollegiate title and fight managers considered him a grand prospect. A broken leg, suffered on the football field, kept him from the ring last winter.

But for this day at least, the huge patient is rather pitiful. The blow on his skull caused a blood clot on the brain affecting his entire side. While Lassman is not paralyzed, that part of his body is numb and hard to control. He cannot remember a struggle game or happening of the football season and even more distant events are difficult to recall. His eyes blink constantly.

Badly Hurt. "It's just as though my body was split down the middle," he said. "Everything on the left side is blank. Only half my mouth tastes things when I eat. The doctors stick pins in my arm but I can't feel them. It hurts to think but I'll be O. K."

"I'm no cream-puff," he grinned in twisted fashion. "I'm rugged. They tell me I had a close call. If I hadn't had a tough skull I'd have gone out. I can walk some now, though, and I'll soon be ready for more. Doctors say I've got to have a lot of sunshine."

A nurse came in with the announcement that it was time for exercise. The "jiminy shirt" of the bed-ridden was replaced by pajamas and a bath robe. Lassman hauled himself to his feet and tottered gleefully out into the hospital corridor.

It was a grand occasion, away from side to side, his left leg hitching a bit and left arm crooked to his body, the tall broad youngster swung slowly down the corridor, stopping at each room to bow greetings and thanks for some tid-bit sent to him by another patient. They shouted back and the bedlam, so strange in such a place, brought nurses, orderlies and internes running to greet with the happy youth over his progress.

"Doing road-work," he told them as he swung proudly along, right hand touching the wall to keep balance.

Not satisfied with that the battered warrior leaned his great bulk against the wall and lifted his hands to a fighting pose.

"A few more months and I'll be doing this again," he said. "I wanted to fight this winter. See, I can hook a little with my left. I love this. Football's all right but boxing is the greatest game of all."

Flu Creating Phenomenal Demand for Vicks VapoRub

Although the flu itself it not so serious as in 1918, authorities stress the importance of taking every possible precaution for fear of the complications which invade the weakened system after a flu-attack.

They agree, especially, prompt treatment of every cold, as colds lower the body resistance and make it easier for flu or pneumonia to get a foothold.

That the public is heeding this warning is indicated by the phenomenal demand for Vicks VapoRub, the famous external treatment which kept to fame almost overnight during the 1918 epidemic. In spite of triple capacity the Vicks laboratories are once more operating night and day, and 422,999 jars are now being produced every 24 hours.
