Winter Sports

DECISION to stage the annual Klamath winter carnival at Fort Klamath this year, has been met with enthusiastic applause from every citizen of the Klamath country.

Klamath is endowed with natural assets—during the summer fishing, outing and sight-seeing; during the fall, deer hunting and duck hunting; and, last but not least, during the winter, skiing, skating and other winter sports.

Inasmuch as these assets are the heritage of the Klamath country, their value perhaps is not assessed at its full worth. In other words they could be capitalized to a greater extent.

Dead capital never built an empire; nor are nature-given assets utilized to their full extent without effort, imagination and exploitation.

So it is that we are glad of the support accorded the Fort Klamath winter sports each year, and believe that as the years pass, this event will become more and more of a national attraction.

A Lesson

PRESS DISPATCHES report the conviction of a Union county deer hunter who shot and killed a farmer riding on a white horse last September. The hunter said it was an accident; nobody denies that, but it was more than that—it was criminal carelessness.

In convicting that nimrod of manslaughter, the jury not only upheld law and justice but, indirectly, administered an object lesson to every hunter of Oregon who goes into the woods.

A few more convictions for criminal negligence and carelessness, and these regrettable hunting accidents would not be such frequent occurrences each hunting season.

What modern kids need is a course in those old-fashioned lectures beginning: "As long as you put your feet under my table, young man."

A free country is one in which those who said the law wouldn't work do their utmost to keep it from working.

Correct this sentence: "When I try to work one of the kid's problems and fail," said he, "I don't stay mad at the family all evening."

MEDFORD WINS FROM KLAMATH

bona Barnett scored the first basket of the game for Medford. The Klamath offensive then took the ball with Crochet tossing in the ball to even the count and give the local supporters cause for some real cheering. During this early part of the game the Klamath defensive players broke up no end of Medford plays as they neared the scoring zone; Pruitt, Olson and especially Robertson doing some fine work in recovering the ball only to have Klamath offensive fail to start with the necessary dash and drive.

Melvin, the all-state forward for Medford, soon slipped in again and sank a crible which gave his team a lead they never relinquished. On the very next play Melvin again was by the Klamath defense for a basket and was followed by Bowerman for still one more as the Klamath defense seemed to slow up. The Medford offense was breaking so fast it caught the Klamath guards flat-footed on play after play. Crochet however gave the local rooters encouragement as he made a pretty shot from the side line. Crochet made this shot as he was on his knees and it must have been an ill omen as it was his last field goal of the game. Medford made another one after missing several tries, the quarter ending with Medford leading 19 to 4. At the start of the second quarter both teams continued their hard playing with Robertson scoring a basket for Klamath only to foul McDonald on the next play for the first foul of the game. The Medford offensive continued in high gear and, although their shooting was very poor in spots they increased their lead until at half time they were leading 19 to 9. At the outset of the second half Medford made a basket from the tip off to increase their lead as the game was slowed up with several fouls being called on both sides. During the third quarter Melvin, the Medford forward, continued to show his stuff and slipped in a couple more. Robertson and Kendall both registered for Klamath high, Kendall's shot being about the fanciest one of the game, coming from an seemingly impossible position to arch into the basket for a score. During the third quarter Coach Callison for Medford sent in substitutes for Melvin and Garnett and their offensive play suffered accordingly with little scoring being done by either side.

During the latter part of the game the Klamath offensive seemed to become more disorganized than ever and although they had possession of the ball a good share of the time they would fail to get it through for tries at the basket. The game ended with Medford leading 39 to 23 in a well deserved victory. Kendall, the slight built Klamath forward, was easily the best offensive player for Klamath, being the only local man able to consistently get through the Medford defense for shots at the basket.

The local team, as individuals, did not seem so far surpassed by their opponents from Medford but they were hopelessly outclassed in team play, apparently not having played together long enough to assimilate each other's style of play. Coach French, with more time, should have a team well worth going to see as his boys have every indication of being real basketball players. The Medford quintet has played together for a number of years, being practically the same team as entered in the state meet at Salem last year, where they placed second. Melvin and Morgan were at that time both selected as the best in the state for their respective positions.

The lineup: Medford: Melvin 12, Thomas 6, McDonald 7, Garnett 3, Anderson 9, Morgan 4. Klamath Falls: Kendall 11, Crochet 4, Robertson 6, Pruitt 2, Olsen 9. Referee: Hendrickson.

CHARGE KEYES WITH BRIBERY

The judge ruled that the question called for a conclusion from the witness.

The state quickly followed this tangent, however, with the question, "were the payments made for any matter other than the dismissal of the two cases pending against you?" Berman in a low tone replied: "No." He added that all of his visits to the Getzoff tailor shop were made to "fix" the cases against him.

The state withdrew from the examination at this point and Judd Russ, one of Keyes' attorneys, began a cross examination of Berman.

As Russ began his examination of Berman, the "bright youngster of the Julian Corporation," told the courtroom that he had turned state's evidence because he was tired of being harassed for every cent he possessed.

"I'll tell you why I am up here testifying in this case," Berman said. "I just got sick and tired of being shaken down for everything I had and I just made up my mind to come here and tell the truth."

Berman said that he went to Lucian Wheeler, then a private detective, and now Byron Pitts, chief investigator, and asked him what he would do when the indictment charging him with bribery was returned.

"He told me the only thing I could do," Berman said, "in as much as they had me broke and I couldn't afford to hire attorneys, was to come clean and tell the truth—just make a clean breast of everything."

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 12. (AP)—Asa Keyes, former district attorney on trial with five other defendants for bribery and conspiracy, today had heard Jacob Berman, "Bright Boy" of the Julian Petroleum case, tell the jury that he "paid out $49,000 and received nothing for it."

"And Ben Getzoff told me repeatedly that Asa Keyes got it all," testified Berman who turned state's witness after being sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary on a federal charge in connection with the Julian Petroleum case.

Apparently laboring under a great mental strain, and starting with his first alleged payment of $10,000 which he claims he made as a "preliminary step" to keep out of San Quentin prison, Berman said he "put up" $49,000 and also made presents of gifts.

Berman, alias Jack Bennett, depicted Ben Getzoff, the tailor, in the role of direct "go between" who he said, was continually nagging him to pay additional money so "that Keyes' new home could be paid for and gambling debts could be cleared."

"Prior to this time," said Berman, "Ben Getzoff said he wanted to buy a car for Keyes' daughter. I told him that Ed Rosenberg ought to buy it. He said Rosenberg (one of the Julian defendants) had done plenty and was broke. I told Ben to buy a car that wouldn't cost more than $1,000 and gave him a $1,000 bill."

Testimony revealed that Milton Pike, former employee of the Getzoffs had talked over what he had heard in the tailor shop with Rev. R. P. "Bob" Schuler, of Los Angeles and had sold the contents of his diary to a Los Angeles newspaper for $2,000. Pike said he got $1,000 of it, and Joseph Sherman, another Getzoff employee $1,000.

After his acquittal in the Julian case, Berman said he thanked Keyes for not "bearing down" on him too hard, and that Keyes replied that he was glad that Berman was not convicted. At this time, Berman testified "Ed Rosenberg gave Keyes the expensive wrist watch," and said during the presentation of it: "Take this is one of the best fellows I ever met."
