"To be a little kinder with the passing of each day.
To leave but happy memories as we go along our way.
To use possessions that are ours in service full and free.
To sacrifice the trivial things for larger goods to be.
To give love in lavish ways that friendship true may live.
To be less quick to criticize, more ready to forgive.
To use such talents as we have that happiness may grow.
To take the bitter with the sweet, assured 'tis better so.
To be quite free from self-interest whatever the task we do.
To help the world's faith stronger grow, in all that's good and true.
To keep our faith in God and right no matter how things run.
To work and play and pray and trust until the journey's done.
God grants to us the strength of heart and motive and of will.
To do our part and falter not, His purpose to fulfill."

AHEAD of us, resplendent in all of its radiant promises, stretches the New Year 1929. Like a rose-colored dawn it raises a shiny head for us to glimpse the opportunities that lie well within its grasp. Attainment of them is alone a matter of personal achievement.

They are there for us to take if we can seize them, win them by our own exertion. And the new year for us is going to be a year of signal fulfillment. This mysterious yet unfathomable New Year, which is upon us, what is it going to give us? And what is it going to take away?

There is something exhilarating in the new year. It is a new birth—a new baptism of life. On New Year's day we all felt the new vigor and the new force which the world has found, and life always seems to don a new grace. In one year rightly directed one may retrieve lost happiness if he will but think and resolve to act. It is no use to regret. No one has ever lived a perfect life and made no mistakes. To err is but human. Do not drag your useless regrets into the new year and soil its white pages with mourning. Life is far too short and too precious. Turn a brave and smiling face to the world, for the world is kind and there will be more hands held out to help you up than there are ready to beat you down.

What if last year did have its mistakes, its disappointments, its dumps, its grievances, its grouches.

Today is another tomorrow, tomorrow is always supposed to be the fulfillment of one's dreams and ideals.

Earl Whitlock's History of Oregon

In the convention of 1818 the boundary between Canada and the United States was fixed at the line of 49 degrees North from the Lake of the Woods to the Rocky Mountains, the land west of this point to be open to both parties for ten years.

It will be seen, therefore, that for a time the political faith of our state was in the hands of fate. Only time could tell whether the Union Jack of the Stars and Stripes would eventually fly over this territory.

The Will to Achieve

The constant application of ideals to one's work, together with an ambition to succeed in spite of all obstacles, have been largely responsible for the high position we have attained in our profession.
