

MANY POUNDS NAILS PICKED UP BY MAGNET

Highway Road-Sweeping Machine Brings in 69 1/2 Pounds Metal

Have you ever gazed angrily at a nail lodged in your automobile tire, firm in the belief that that particular nail was the only one in three townships and that it was just your—luck to pick it up?

Have you ever gazed at a smooth, hard, straight road and wonder how anything so mundane, so aggravating as a tack could disturb such a perfect motor-dream?

In event you have—or even if you have not—the display at the state highway office will open your eyes somewhat. This exhibit shows how much puncture material, in the form of nails, wire, bolts, tacks and miscellaneous bits of sharp steel, was picked up by the state highway magnetized road sweeper on 145 miles of the Klamath Falls-Lakeview highway and the Fremont highway.

In actual weight, this array of puncture material came to 69 and one eighth pounds segregated as follows:

Bolts, ten and one half pounds; tacks one-half pound; nails, spikes, 17 pounds; tobacco cans, 13 and one quarter pounds; wire, 12 and one half pounds; and miscellaneous 15 and three-quarters pounds.

The highway magnetizer did not miss anything. It would pick up a five pound wrench from the road and other pieces of steel are magnetized following contact with the highway device.

"We plan to put these nails and the like on display in the near future so that motorists may know what it is and how much it is that brings grief to their pleasure trips," said C. C. Seely, resident highway engineer.

Messages received here said the transfer of the passengers was effected without accident in a calm sea and had been completed within a short time after the arrival of the Pan-America.

When Captain T. P. Quinn of the President Garfield sent out his S O S the Pan-America, which was nearly 200 miles away headed for the position of the stricken ship, arriving alongside in mid-afternoon.

The passengers were loaded into the President Garfield's life boats and trans-shipped to the rescue vessel.

Both the President Garfield and the Pan-America left New York last Thursday, the Dollar Line starting on a world cruise and the Pan-America on her regular run to Nassau.

The passengers of the President Garfield, officers of the line said, would be cared for at the expense of the company at Nassau until arrangements were made either for their return to New York or for the continuation of their trip.

The President Garfield is a twin screw steel steamer built in 1921.

She was originally christened the Blue Hen State. She is of 10,558 gross tons, 502 feet one inch length and 72 feet beam.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21. (AP)—The Dollar line was informed today that the ninety passengers from the grounded steamer President Garfield had been landed at Nassau, Bahama Islands, by the liner Pan-America and were quartered at the Colonial Hotel there.

OREGON STATE FOUNTAIN LADY IS DESTROYED

CORVALLIS, Ore., Jan. 21. (AP)—The Lady of the Fountains, for 25 years a landmark on the Oregon State College campus, was demolished by vandals last night. Sledge hammers were used to smash the statue into bits.

No clue as to the identity of the vandals has been found.

The lady, cast in iron, was life size and the center of an ornamental stone bowl.

It had been stolen many times since the class of 1902 placed it on the campus, but always returned. In 1902, after an absence of a year, it was set solidly in concrete to forestall further departures.

AT THE THEATRES

At The Pelican

An expose of the dishonesty rampant beneath the tinsel trappings of a traveling carnival is made in "The Spieker," a picture with a tent show locale produced for Pathé by Ralph Block, which comes to the Pelican theatre tomorrow and Wednesday.

Renee Adoree, Alan Hale, Clyde Cook and Fred Kohler have featured roles in "The Spieker," which was directed by Tay Garnett. Miss Adoree plays the youthful manager of a tent show, who wages war against grifters among her employees. Hale has the title role. Cook plays a tight wire walker and Kohler the manager of the carnival concessions, who is a crook of the first water.

"The Spieker," is an original story by Hal Conklin, adapted for the screen by the author and Garnett, the director. The music is said to be unusually effective.

JUNIOR ORPHEUM VAUDEVILLE WEEKLY FEATURE

At The Liberty

Buck Jones, Fox Films star, has a very difficult role in "The Branded Sombreiro," which plays at the Liberty Theatre the last time today. As Starr Hallett, the adopted son of John Hallett, Buck relinquishes his entire inheritance so that his brother, Lane, will have an unobstructed field to win the girl he loves.

His fight against tremendous odds wins Buck the friendship of the townspeople, who are organizing to rid the county of a band of rustlers.

The cornered rustlers put up a stiff fight, but are overcome by sheer grit. Some of the rustlers make a break for freedom. Among them is Lane, Buck's brother. Buck gives Lane his freedom and takes his place as a member of the gang.

Fighting every inch of the way, Buck proves his innocence in a smashing, tearing manner. A fight on an express train is one of the many exciting scenes, and the climax forms a fitting ending for a marvelous display of endurance.

The cast includes Leila Hyams, Jack Boston, Francis Ford, Josephine Borio, Leo Kelley. Lambert Hillier directed the production.

The first month of the year was named after Janus, a Roman god.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO FLU

Coughs from Flu May Weaken Your System and Lead to Serious Trouble

You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membrane and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membrane and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to

At The Pine Tree

"The Vanishing Pioneer" Jack Holt Scores in Grey Story. Water is the life blood of the American West. Men and women suffered and died for the lack of it. They worked heroically to develop it and they have fought bitterly many times to defend it.

Around that theme Zane Grey has built a tremendously powerful story for the screen in "The Vanishing Pioneer," the Paramount picture playing at the Pine Tree theatre the last times today.

In the prologue which opens the picture a band of pioneers are plodding across the desert. Dust clouds envelop them. A burning sun beats down upon them. Their water barrels are empty. Far behind them are snow capped mountain peaks, mile-stones of their painful progress. Ahead other peaks lift their jagged heads up toward the cloudless sky. Between the two mountain ranges is shimmering desert.

Water!—The pioneers and their animals are dying for lack of it.

Twenty-five years later water has made a green paradise of a semidesert region. Survivors of the heroic band of pioneers pictured in the prologue have developed that water. Then they have to fight for it against scheming politicians who would spoil them for gain.

There is a bitterness to the theme which has been well carried out throughout the picture. Not once does it drop to the level of the "western thriller" type. There are tense moments, gun fights, a jail break, some tender love scenes, but through them all is maintained the same high pitch, that makes the prologue a genuine classic.

Jack Holt makes his return to Paramount pictures in this production in a role perfectly suited to him.

falling and he was seated in the chair of death. Three men, including the executioner, strapped him in. Then Elliott stepped directly behind the chair, took a last glance at the killer and threw the switch.

James had spiritual guidance as he entered the house. He was hastily bound to the chair, the executioner again stepped back and after the first shock James was pronounced dead.

Jaworski, in his younger days was known as Paul Pallas, a church choir singer.

He was leader of the flat-head mob of payroll robbers of the Pittsburgh district. At one time his gang mined a highway and blew an armored payroll car from the road. The mob specialized in payroll robberies, and during one of these Jaworski killed a guard. For that crime he was sentenced to death.

Awaiting sentence in the Allegheny county jail in downtown Pittsburgh, Jaworski in August 1927, made a daring escape. Aided by a two-gun man, who met him in the visitor's cage, he shot his way through the corridors, out the main door and into the automobile. Two guards were wounded.

For months Jaworski was in hiding. A Pittsburgh resident, who knew the criminal, spotted him in a Cleveland restaurant. The police were called. As they stepped into the doorway, Jaworski drew two guns and attempted to shoot his way to the street. He killed one officer, but was shot in the neck himself. This resulted in partial paralysis of one side.

Returned to Pittsburgh by the Ohio authorities, Jaworski requested the Governor to sign his death warrant quickly. Mrs. Katherine L. Logan, of Detroit, his sister, fought the case, claiming her brother was insane from a wound in the neck. The state ration board refused a sanity hearing after Gov. John Fisher had stayed execution for 20 days. Told of the move to have him declared mentally unsound, Jaworski said, "I'm not crazy. Let's get this thing over with."

His only concern was a continued magazine story he was reading. The final installment was to appear early in February, and he said "Gee, it's tough not to know how that thing ended."

The publisher of the magazine sent an advance copy of the periodical to the jail and Jaworski read the final chapter of the story the day before he was removed to the death house.
