"I'M BROKE AND I'M A FOOL!"

—Mae Busch

By DAN THOMAS
Sea Service Writer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., March 7—"I'm broke because I'm a fool!" That's what Mae Busch told me after revealing in a Los Angeles court that she had only $416 to her name. The film actress went to court to ask for the release of an attachment filed by an agent for that sum. Miss Busch stated that if the attachment was not released she and her sick father, whom she supports, would suffer real want.

"I am not worried over the fact that I am virtually broke," continued Mae. "I have thrown away thousands and thousands of dollars but I'm 'coming back' and I am going to save my money from now on. I've learned my lesson—learned that trying to keep pace with Hollywood doesn't pay."

Judge Marshall F. McComb released the attachment on her "fortune." That money, declared Mae, will keep both her and her father until she gets another job.

Mae's Story

"Before I came to Hollywood I did not know what wealth and luxury were," Miss Busch said. "Then I broke into pictures and met with almost immediate success. Before I realized what was happening more money than I had ever dreamed of started pouring in on me. I guess having so much money turned my head. I started spending it recklessly without a thought of the future."

"My chief ambition was to outdo everyone else in the picture business. And since there are many others with the same idea it proved to be a pretty difficult task. If one of my friends gave a party, I would give one a week or so later on an ever more lavish scale. And if I saw another actress riding in a car which cost more than mine, I couldn't rest until I had bought an even more expensive one. I never stopped to think that some day the flow of gold would stop. That is Hollywood's greatest curse—it makes lavish spenders and poor thinkers."

"There were other things too, a pretentious home, servants and clothes. And they all cost money."

Mae Busch . . . the picture above was taken in 1925. The inset is a recent photograph.
